

Dainty Eaters Have No Fears; World-Shaking Events to Come

By JACK REEVES

The subject for our moans, groans, beefs, and gripes today, will be the much maligned hamburger with its uses and abuses. Every time we wrap our dainty little meat hooks around a hamburger we come away with our pinkies soiled no end. Therefore our suggestion of a remedy is about to be offered.

Hamburgers as we know them, consist of a pie shaped bun approximately six inches in diameter. They usually contain an ice cream scoop full of hamburger, a slice of juicy tomato, relish, onions if you prefer, and mayonnaise.

Why People Want 'Em

Their uses are not many. Generally people order a hamburger if they are hungry. However we find that some characters order one in order to keep the booth they are sitting in at the time. This is neither here nor there. We were going to offer our remedy and here it is.

Why in the name of creation hasn't someone in all the time that hamburgers have been in existence, even thought of inventing a drain spout to keep the juice from running over your fingers and down your sleeves? Think what a godsend this boon to humanity would be to millions of hamburger eaters all over the world.

Plain and Fancy

The spout could be made on the order of those which line the eaves on a house. It would be different in one respect. The drain would have to be detachable, enabling you to secure it firmly to the next hamburger to be eaten. They could come in various styles; red for the girls, and plain for the boys. The spout could be made of permanent material or it could be made of paper and thrown away after using.

If some one doesn't particularly like our idea, please submit a better one and if we consider it plausible it will be printed. In the meantime, yours for bigger and better drain spouts on the American hamburger.

Faculty to Name AAUW Scholarship Candidates

The Oregon division of the American Association of University Women plans to award a $1,500 scholarship to a woman student for advanced study.

Faculty members are requested to suggest candidates for this award to Mrs. Golda Wickham, acting dean of women, who is a member of the state scholarship committee. A year of graduate study is required.
