

Faculty Loses Two, Adds Four Memders This Term

Four new faculty members have been added to the University staff this term, and two professors, Dr. E. Hobart Collins and Dr. Chandler B. Beal, are leaving the campus, it was announced by administration officials this week. The new instructors are Frederick T. Hanneford, Dr. Claude Stimson, Louis Earl Richter, and Miss Margaret E. Brewster.

Hanneford, at present acting head of the school of architecture at the University of Florida, will replace Percy Page Adams in April. Adams has been with the University school of architecture since 1901 and will retire April 1. Adams' successor received his bachelor of arts at Washington State college in 1924, and has been with the University of Florida since 1926.

Dr. Stimson has been head of the economics department of Knox college at Galesburg, Illinois. Stimson, who joined the University economics staff at the beginning of the term, has taught in California, at Montana State and at the University of Chicago.

A former WAC lieutenant, Miss Brewster will assume the duties of women's swimming instructor this term, announced Dr. R. W. Leighton, dean of the school of physical education. Miss Brewster received her bachelor of science degree in 1935 from the University of Missouri. She has taught at the University of Michigan and the University of California.

Richter, recently discharged from the army and a former graduate assistant at the University has been appointed instructor of romance languages, according to Dr. J. H. Gilbert, dean of the college of liberal arts.

On the other side of the ledger two University professors have left this term: Dr. E. Hobart Collins, assistant professor in physics, and Dr. Chandler B. Beal, professor of romance languages. Dr. Collins resigned his position to accept a job as physicist with the Weyerhaeuser Lumber company at Longview, Washington.

Dr. Beal was granted a six month leave from the University to accept a visiting professorship of French literature at Princeton, New Jersey.

Demand for Housing

iversity mothers' club, the Eugene chamber of commerce, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the city authorities, the Eugene Register-Guard, and radio station KORE.

Although there are still not enough rooms for everyone, more calls are coming in to Mrs. Alice MacDuff, University housing secretary. Those who applied early for their housing have been taken care of.

The crowding of six girls into a suite built for four the first few weeks of last term will not be repeated, according to E. M. Pallett, registrar. Many people had reserved no rooms in advance, and the University did all they could to find places for them all to stay, rather than turn them away.

Letters Warn Students

Such a situation was avoided this term by the sending of letters warning of the acute shortage of housing to students for whom no room could be assured. Mr. Pallett pointed out that a larger number of students attending the University this year are living at home, thus easing the situation.

This school year is the first in recent years in which the number of registrees has exceeded the University facilities for housing them, Mr. Pallett said.

Of those who are now living in Gerlinger and Villard, most are former students who have been discharged from the service or who have returned after being employed in war work.

More facilities will probably be available next fall, according to Mr. Pallett.

In the course of his journey he attended the American Library association meetings in Chicago and next week he will be in Cleveland, Ohio, where he will attend meetings of the Association of American Colleges from January 9 to 11. Dr. Newburn also plans to meet with University of Oregon alumni in New York.

He is expected to return to the University about January 16.

Winter Class for New Law Students

For the first time in the law school's history an entering class in first year law will be given winter term, according to Orlando John Hollis, dean of the University of Oregon school of law. Registration for the class was held January 1.

According to applications already received by Dean Hollis, the winter term class will be larger than the fall term entering class of 17 first-year students. Many veterans who were discharged too late to enter school fall term have asked to begin their first-year law work as soon as possible, and it is for this reason that the action has been taken, said Dean Hollis. He added that there will also be a number of second and third-year law students returning to the campus winter term.
