

Meeting of Oregon Alumni Highlight Newburn Trip

Most Interesting Experience Of Trip Is Alumni Luncheon At the Roosevelt

By MARYANN THIELEN

A meeting with Oregon alumni in New York City was one of the highlights of President Harry K. Newburn's recent 24-day trip to the east. He also met with college and library heads with a view towards finding a new head librarian.

Dr. Newburn attended the American Library association meeting in Chicago; however, he could not divulge any information as to what was accomplished. While in Chicago, the president also conferred with Dr. Harold J. Noyes, dean elect of the University of Oregon Dental College in Portland.

A luncheon with Oregon alumni in the Roosevelt hotel in New York was arranged by Allen Eaton, graduate of the University and now with the Russell Sage foundation, and was the most interesting experience of Dr. Newburn's trip. "I spoke to the group about the University and was surprised at their intense interest in the student union building," the president said. He commented that there is a sizeable group of New York alumni who have formed an informal organization that meets when the occasion arises.

During his stay in New York, Dr. Newburn visited with Charles Hulten, associate professor of journalism who is now in New York and Washington, D. C. as deputy director of the information service. He also had breakfast with Theodore Kratt, dean of the school of music, who had just arrived from four months in Europe and was enroute to the University.

Dr. Newburn attended a meeting of the Association of American Colleges in Cleveland where the problems of the returned veterans and the shortage of housing were discussed. Delegates from the United Nations Education, Science, and Culture association gave reports to the gathering.

While Dr. Newburn was in Cleveland, Mrs. Newburn and baby Mike visited friends in Iowa City, where the Newburns lived for 12 years before coming west.

Personnel work occupied much of Dr. Newburn's time as there are several faculty posts to be filled and other changes always occurring; however, he could not make any statements regarding these positions at this time.

There they made their "bow before royalty," playing for the Norwegian crown prince and princess.

In August, he tried his hand at real production, putting GIs and Norwegian girls into a musical review. "The Norwegian gals did pretty well with the stage trade-tricks," Edwards said with a grin, "although it was a little difficult to define for them some of the American phrases, such as 'Get Hep!' (which was the name of the review)."

Before entering the service, Edwards was prominent both in and around the campus in the pursuit of drama and music. He took part in many University theater guild productions, including "Night Must Fall," "Berkeley Square," "As Husbands Go" and "Arms and the Man." As dance director, he worked with Horace Robinson on "With Fear and Trembling." In music, the talented pianist played

An iron lung, which was demonstrated at the Co-op last Friday in connection with the March of Dimes drive, was rushed back to the Sacred Heart hospital Saturday to save the life of a young woman afflicted with paralysis. After three days spent in the respirator, she has recovered sufficiently to be able to survive without it, hospital attendants report.

KKK Key Kept Carefully Quiet

Maybe it's the latest thing in the way of vitamins.

Or does someone have a better solution to the KKK that popped up all over the campus overnight? If it is the Ku Klux Klan re-activated, they are certainly following an unorthodox course. At least the U. S. History books don't credit the Klan with signs as a giveaway to their action in a territory.

Public-spirited students suggested maybe the initials stood for Keep Kampus Klean—a good idea, in any event. Some one else proclaimed it could be nothing else but advertisement for the forthcoming Coed Capers—Koming Koed Kapers.

And with a wolfish gleam, one man-about-town suggested Kozy, Kuddly, Korners, or even possibly Kute Kuddly Koeds. The more cynical scoffed that probability off and suggested maybe Crazy Kampus Koeds, or even Kuit, Kuick, and Kareful. The originator of the latter really taxes his imagination.

And yet the originators of the

Patients Unhappy Over Visitor Ban

Visiting the pill palace as usual yesterday afternoon, this reporter noticed the serenity of the place, the happy look on the nurse's face, and the grouchiness of the patients, due, undoubtedly, to the visiting restriction set up by Dr. Fred Miller January 29.

Infirmary rolls have dropped from 18 to 11, which could be due to lack of visitors, or just healthy patients.

Those who are hoping the staff will exterminate the "no visiting" banishment soon are Joene Johnson, Anne Weller, Molly Douglas, Mary Struve, Laurel Anderson, Lynn Smith, Ruth Schneider, Thomas Knapp, Ed Marshall, Earl Anderson, and Jim Cassell.

KKK continue to stay out of the limelight, for no verified report has yet been offered as to what the KKK was really intended for.

Do you have a KKK complex? Those army K rations could have done that, maybe.
