Veterans Launch New Organization

The organization of a veteran's group was unanimously approved by members present at a general meeting yesterday at 4 p.m. in the music auditorium.

Suggestions of the planning committee were presented and discussed by the veterans present. The primary point of discussion was the question of entering of the group into campus politics. Krazy Kopy Krawl Slated For Saturday By Admakers Korsages will be in order for Kampus Kuties at the Krazy Kopy Krawl, second all-campus dance of the term, slated for this Saturday night in McArthur court. Short silks will be worn.

McArthur court is being recon-verted into a ballroom by the ad-makers, and University students are promised the latest in the way of advertising layouts, design, color, and selling power. Every trick the advertising honorary members have picked up during their college careers is being employed in the decorations—and more besides, members of the decorations committee hint.

Tickets at Co-op

Tickets for the Krazy Kopy Krawl will go on sale at the Co-op this morning at 9. They will be sold there until noon and will be on sale at the Side from 1 to 5 o'clock this afternoon, Annamae Winship, ticket co-chairman, announced last night. Men's houses who have not yet gotten their tickets are asked to pick them up at the Emerald business office or call her at extension 215 after 7 p.m. Making their first appearance at an all-campus dance this term will be Ted Hallock's twelve piece orchestra. Hallock's music makers were first heard this term at the Hoopster's Hop sponsored by the ISA.

University men are urged to hurry and purchase tickets to the Krawl, either from the representative in their living organization, or from representatives who will be in the Co-op Thursday, Friday, and Saturday mornings, and at the Side in the afternoon.

Premium On Reds

Men dating redheads for the Krawl have a 9-cent leeway over the man who prefers blondes, and will have to part with $1.27 for admission to the event. And the extravagant of the lot, those whose choice runs to brunettes, will pay to the tune of $1.34—which adds up to a 16-cent preference over redheads.

Despite the high admission prices levied on campus brunettes for the event, ticket sales to date indicate that the brunettes on the campus are still pretty popular dates.

HAVE YOU ASKED YOUR REDHEAD YET?

Dr. Osusky's Iliad Veers From Bombs to Webfoots

By LAURA OLSON

Addressing students at the University of Oregon is a far cry from watching black coffins (Buzz bombs) rain down on London. This is the opinion of Dr. Stefan Osusky, former Czechoslovak ambassador to France, who is touring 56 colleges and universities throughout the United States. He will speak in McArthur court at 11 a.m. today.

Dr. Osusky, who was in London during the war as a member of the Czechoslovakian government in exile, is making this tour under the auspices of the Institute of International Education in New York City. He has been connected with the institute for 28 years, and has helped arrange passageway for exchange professors and students between Europe and America.

Left France

In May 1940 Dr. Osusky was completing his twentieth year as Czechoslovakian ambassador to France. At the same time Adolph Hitler was planning the march of his armies into the low lands of Europe. As the Germans entered France, Dr. Osusky left—hurriedly. At a southern French port he boarded a Dutch ship sailing for England. Disembarking at Portsmouth, England, he proceeded to London where he was to make his headquarters for the next five years.

The terror of the V-1 and V-2 bombs were described by Dr. Osusky. "There was a defense against the V-1's," he said. "Their great danger were the fragments dislodged after the explosion. We could hear their buzzing as they fell. The V-2's were the terror of all England. Several seconds after the bombs hit, the sound of their falling could be heard. The velocity of the bombs was greater than the sound. All we could do was wait."

No English

Dr. Osusky came to the United States before the start of World War I. Although unable to speak more than a few words of English, he entered the University of Chicago. "I studied with a dictionary in one hand at all times," he commented, "and the peculiar thing was this—my professors didn't realize I couldn't speak English." He graduated in 1915 and won the degree of Ph.D. in philosophy and psychology and the J.D. degree in law there.

The proper aftermath is this. Dr. Osusky will speak at his alma mater as part of this tour, and he will appear on the "University of Chicago Round Table" broadcast.

Hospitality Note... Parking Spots Needed For Visiting Editors' Cars

This week-end the University of Oregon, through its School of Journalism, is host to the 27th annual Oregon Press Conference. Probably 100 of Oregon's editors and publishers will be here from Friday morning to Saturday evening. Many of them will find it most convenient to drive here from their home towns.

Parking congestion on the campus will make it difficult for our guests to find a place to stand their cars while they attend the sessions to which they have been invited. It would be an act of gracious hospitality if the Oregon staff members who have been using the parking-space east of Friendly hall and in the north end of the University street use some other spot Friday morning. Saturday morning the situation will be a little less difficult. Anything faculty members can do to lessen the inconvenience of parking for our guests will be gratefully appreciated by journalism staff members, who on occasion will be happy to do what they can to reciprocate.

Guide Supplement Nears Completion

Editors are hopeful that the winter term supplement to the student directory, the Pigger's Guide, will be off the press this weekend, and ready for distribution the first of next week.

The directory, which will contain the addresses of approximately 1,000 new students and 500 address changes, was expected to be ready at an earlier date, but because compilation was begun late so as to catch late registrants which totaled 20 and 30 a day up through last week and because the University press is particularly busy at this time, the Guide was not able to be printed until now.
