Floats Replace Old Mill-Race

Traditional Canoe Fete Given Shore Leave

The old mill-race is empty, but the absence of its familiar waters will not detract from Junior Weekend gaiety. The spirit of the traditional canoe fete has again become amphibious and this year's campus festivities will feature another colorful float parade.

Dick Savinar, float committee chairman, has organized house living organizations into teams of two, and they will work together in both construction and planning. The Fiji lot will be available to any teams who wish to erect their floats in a convenient place.

Houses have been allowed an increase in the amount of money which they may spend on their decorations and rental. The former limit of $15 for each house has been raised to $25, or a total

Student Panel to Discuss UNO Resolutions at Assembly Today

As part of the program to acquaint University students with the resolutions adopted recently by the Northwest Pacific College congress concerning the students' stake in the atomic age, this morning's ASUO assembly in McArthur court at 11 will feature a panel discussion of the PNCC.

The assembly has been arranged by Lloyd Frese and Lois McConkey, University delegates to the Congress. Arousing campus interest in current world problems as well as enlisting student participation in the debate of the resolutions is the purpose of the assembly.

Members of the student panel include: Miss McConkey, Frese, Ted Hallock, Emerald columnist and campus bandleader whose interest in the movement was indicated by his criticism of the PNCC published in last week's Emerald, and Dorothy Bruhn, graduate student majoring in economics.

Charles Howard, professor of law who formerly served with the army of occupation in Germany, will be moderator, and Victor P. Morris, dean of the school of business administration and adviser of the One World club, will be available as a source of reference. "It seems to me that it is an

Marshall-Case-Haycox Scholarships Named

Manuscripts for the annual Marshall-Case-Haycox short story contest must be turned in to Room 4, Journalism building before May 1, W.F.G. Thacher, professor of English and advertising, announced today.

All entries must be in duplicate although a clear carbon copy will be acceptable. A piece of paper bearing the author's name must be enclosed in an envelope on the face of which appears the name of the story. The envelope will then be turned in with the manuscript.

All Eligible

All regularly enrolled undergraduates of the University are eligible to submit an entry. The prizes are $50, first; $30, second; $20, third.

This contest is sponsored annually by three Oregon alumni: Edison T. Marshall, Robert O. Case and Ernest Haycox, all of whom are now successful writers. It was originated by Marshall in 1916, the year after he left the University. Case and Haycox joined him later in financing the scholarship.

After he left school, Marshall spent some time writing short stories before he enlisted in the army in 1917. After the war, he started writing professionally. During the next 20 years, Marshall wrote many novels, short stories and magazine articles. His novel, "Benjamin Blake" was a Literary Guild selection and many others are equally well-known. One of his short stories, "The Heart of Little Shikara," was awarded the O. Henry memorial prize as the best short story of 1921.

The PNCC was held April 5 and 6 on the Reed college campus, Portland, where representatives from 31 colleges and universities in the northwest discussed world problems and the organization of the United Nations and formulated opinions and decisions concerning these problems.

Ballots will be distributed at the assembly today in order to ascertain student opinion on the decisions. The delegates receiving the greatest volume of student interest and opinion in the shortest time will be sent to the United Nations security council meeting in New York with the purpose of submitting the resolutions. The Portland League of Women Voters and KGW are sponsoring this trip. Mimeographed copies of the resolutions will be circulated to those attending the assembly.

In order to facilitate voting on the resolutions, ballots will be circulated in classes in the next few days and polling booths will be set up at various places on the campus. Skull and Dagger, sophomore men's honorary, will distribute
