

Hoyt to Address Journalists Here

Palmer Hoyt, publisher of the Denver Post and former publisher of the Oregonian, will speak to journalism students and interested newspapermen at the University school of music auditorium at 8 p.m. Tuesday, May 7. The address will be broadcast by transcription over station KGW at a later hour.

Hoyt will speak on freedom of the news and will be introduced by Thomas B. Purcell, president of the Oregon Newspaper Publishers' association, who succeeded Hoyt in that position. Purcell is editor of the Gresham Outlook.

Hoyt is a graduate of the University school of journalism with the class of 1923. He was called to the Portland Oregonian from the Pendleton East Oregonian in 1926 and remained there until last February when he accepted a position with the Denver Post.

Hoyt will be the guest of the Oregon chapter of Sigma Delta Chi, men's professional journalism honorary, at dinner Tuesday evening.

Because it was possible for Hoyt to come to the University only on the date scheduled, George Hopkins, professor of piano, graciously volunteered to move his recital, scheduled for Tuesday evening, to Thursday in order to make the hall available for the address, George S. Turnbull, acting dean of the school of journalism, said.

Museum Receives Oriental Art Book

The University Museum library announced this week the recent addition of a set of six illustrated volumes on the George Eumorfopoulos collection; namely, Catalogue of the Chinese, Korean and Persian Pottery and Porcelain by R. L. Hobson of the British museum.

George Eumorfopoulos was a well-known British collector and connoisseur of objects of Oriental art, particularly the art of the Chinese. As an importer of Indian commercial products he became interested in the art of the East and began to collect Oriental art about 1900. He employed no dealers or experts but did all his own buying in Paris and London.

Although he kept his valuable collection at the Chelsea home, he never feared burglary, for all of his pieces were too well known to experts to be of any value to the underworld. In 1935 he sold a part of his collection to the Victor and Albert and British Museums for half a million dollars.

The early specimens described in these books are all the result of excavation for railways and consequently do not represent any accomplishments such as one might find in the contents of the tomb of an emperor or high official. It is, however, Mr. Eumorfopoulos's claim that he has never bought a piece which is of purely archaeological interest. The numerous reproductions show that the artistic level of the objects is indeed exceedingly fine.

"Management at the Bargaining Table," by Lee Hill and Charles R. Hook, was reviewed by Karl W. Onthank, dean of personnel administration, in the April issue of the Pacific Northwest Personnel Management association's news letter.

According to Onthank's review, the book deals with protective clauses for union management, and labor security and with the actual business of negotiations and War Labor Board relations.
