

Sales Positions Open to Seniors

Positions are now open to graduating senior men as salesmen and accountants with the Firestone Tire and Rubber company, according to a letter received by the University employment bureau from E. J. Stevens, district manager of the company in Portland.

Those accepted for the positions will undergo a training period, probably in Portland, and in the main office in Akron, Ohio. Following the training they will be assigned to the Pacific coast.

Application blanks for these positions are now available at the employment bureau and must be filled out and returned to Portland within the next few days. The applications will then be considered and appointments for interviews with Stevens will be arranged.

The bureau urges those interested to file their applications at once, as Stevens plans to make his selections and conduct the interviews within two weeks.

Picnic Cancelled

The Gamma Alpha Chi picnic which was to have been held Friday has been cancelled due to too many conflicts.

Eleven Names Added At Campus Rest Home

Strains of Lynn Renick's rendition of "I'm Always Chasing Rainbows" met the ear of passers-by about 3:30 yesterday afternoon at the infirmary; however, Miss Renick informed us she would be off pill palace rolls and back to classes today.

Oldtimers listed this week include Gloria Stannard, Selma Syme, Barbara Kvern, Wally Heider, and Herbert "Spell it right" Leonnig, while new ones on this week's list include Gen Norton, Lucebell Davis, Janice Nelson, Pat Percival, Elizabeth Paulson, Barbara Weisz, June Clayton, Marven Thomas, Phil George, James Kolts, and Dick Brown.

Looking back at Egypt

(Editor's note: Abdel Kader Mohsin, exchange student from Egypt studying at the architecture school here, will write a series of articles about Egypt for the Emerald. The first appears today.)

By Abdel Kader Mohsin

The link between the east and west, the meeting ground of so many races, nations, religions and civilizations, offers the visitor surely more than any other country in the world for a real holiday. Both in winter and in summer, it is the ideal place for those who are in search of romance, variety, novelty, mystery, health, sport, knowledge or pleasure. Egypt caters to every purse. It is, in fact, not an expensive country as many people would be inclined to think.

Alexandria

Let us go first to Alexandria by air or by sea—to the eastern part in the Mediterranean sea. The unlimited attraction of Alexandria, reminiscent of historic greatness and charm, of Ptolemaic splendor and art, of the glory and romance of Cleopatra and Anthony, will encourage you to spend more and more days there.

The pillar of Pompeii, the palace of Raseltin dating from the great days of Mohamed Aly, the vast harbor with its yachting clubs, the great drive along the sea front several miles, the zoo and the splendid gardens—all these are among Alexandria's endless attractions.

Now to Cairo

You can take a Pullman or aeroplane to Cairo in half an hour. On your way, you will see the Delta green fields stretch to the horizon on either side. Water-wheels as used in Pharaonic days may be seen at intervals along the banks. Here and there close to the villages women and girls are drawing water, which, in jars and tins, they carry away on their heads with almost incredible grace. Sailing boats pass up and down—their tall sails etched in white against a sky of cloudless blue.

Where the two mouths of the river meet at the apex of the Delta triangle stands the great Delta barrage, a triumph of modern engineering. Close by are the wonderfully beautiful Barrage gardens, a living illustration of what can be achieved when gardening skill combines with the climate of Egypt and the generous gifts of the Nile. In a few miles you see Cairo and the pyramids of Giza welcoming you.

You will stay there not less than a week, and after a week you will feel how magnificent romance is Cairo.

NOTES ON RECORD

Bruno Walter conducts the New York Philharmonic in a record premiere of Samuel Barber's "First Symphony" which was composed in 1935. This music is vigorous and original, although awkward in many places. It is written in one compact movement and recorded by Columbia.

Food Suggestions

The following detailed suggestions were given Tuesday by Druid president Bass Dyer for campus living organizations to follow during the nationwide food conservation program:

1. Serve cornbread, oatmeal cakes, and mush.
2. Do not buy any wheat cereals.
3. Serve buckwheat, rye, and soy hotcakes.
4. Use the crusts and heels of bread.
5. Use more beans, soy beans, and lentils.
6. Don't let any bread go to waste.
7. Check the garbage can every day.
8. Return all excess fats to the butcher.
9. Substitute bacon drippings, etc., for shortening when possible.
10. Don't fry—boil, broil, or roast.
11. Read the newspapers and other literature concerning the famine situation.
12. When buying bread, share your extra loaves with other living organizations.
13. Use boiled dressings.
14. Start "buyer's strike" on all wheat and oil products.
15. Serve famine ration meal at least twice. (Approximately 500 calories).
Menu: 1 very small piece cheese
1 small dish potato soup
1 small corn pone with very little marmalade
16. Use fruits and cornstarch puddings instead of pies and cakes for desserts.
17. Plant a garden.
18. Don't use rice as a substitute.
19. Do not buy beer or whiskey. 18 million bushels of grain used in liquor production last year would go a long way toward feeding the world's starving people.
