

Decorations Committees Prep for Junior Prom

Paint be-speckled individuals creeping around the campus in the past few days can be attributed to the Junior Prom spray gun chief, Bill Barnum, or perhaps to the hard work these Webfoots have been doing individually on the prom decorations.

General chairmen for the decorations are June Johnston and Liz Gilmore. Ron Harris is head of supplies; Sharlee Heimann, Leo Kiksche and Lee Benveniste are artists.

Credit for any added beautification one may see at the Igloo should be given to committee chairmen and workers who have put in much of their time and effort on the decorations.

Wall decorations are being prefabricated and drawn at McArthur court and the finishing touches will go on Friday, Saturday, and Monday.

Carpenters have been called in for work on the stage and all the details will be completed by next week, committee heads said.

Living organization participation on decorations includes the following: Gamma Phi Beta: Julie Holman, Jo Kennedy, Gloria Fick, Phyllis Holdman, Jeanne Dodson, Zoe Anderson, Irene Moor, and Eleanor Toll; Alpha Tau Omega: Bob Powell and Cliff Dunson; Judson house: Carline Stewart and Ada Anderson.

Phi Kappa Psi: Mickey Davis; Beta Theta Pi: Jack Morro and Glen Holden; Sigma Phi Epsilon: Bill Barnum, Bob Hestand, and Al Sturtan; Chi Psi: Eleroy Rheims, Doug Rheims, and Gerry Gerwin.

Prom tickets will be on sale in the Co-op Tuesday and Thursday from 1 to 5, Wednesday and Friday from 2 to 5, and Saturday from 8 to 12. They will also be on sale in the educational activities office from 8 to 12 and 1 to 5 weekdays. Tickets are priced at $2.40 a couple.

STUDENT UNION

(Continued from page one) The decorations for the junior prom, scheduled May 11, was authorized, and this article will be the first of the fund for this purpose.

Traffic Situation

Ed Allen, ASUO president, and Gil Roberts, junior representative to the council, were appointed to appear before the next meeting of the Eugene city council May 13 to express the opinion of the council concerning the traffic hazards on Thirteenth avenue east. Allen pointed out the danger to students crossing the street during the school day, and the distracting noise of the trucks passing the school buildings. He will propose to the council that Thirteenth avenue be barricaded from 7:30 a.m. till 3 p.m. from Alder to University streets, thus making it safer and quieter for University students. Action on this will await council action.

Discussed also at the council meeting were the proposed ASUO polling booths and election procedure at the spring election May 16, and action will be taken at the council's next meeting.

The council approved the selection of Marguerite Wittwer as next year's Emerald editor, George Pegg for the position of business manager of the publication, and Robbieurr Warrens as Oregon business manager.

YW-YM Dance Slated For Friday At Duck Pond

Entertaining the campus again this Friday will be the members of the YWCA and YMCA at their campus clothes dance, "Duck Pond." The dance is scheduled to begin at 8 p.m. and will last until 11:30 p.m. It is under the direction of Dedo Misley.

Music and refreshments will be provided and any campus student is welcome to attend. Heading the hostess list is Marjorie Hicks.

Other committees include: music, Shirley Minea and Pat Meyer; tickets, Mary Lou Sexton and Eleanor Tohinis; posters, Carolyn Jenks.

ALUMNA, AUTHOR

(Continued from page one) German whose reasoning was so twisted by Hitler propaganda that he became an irrational anti-semitic Nazi. It is an eloquent plea for understanding. Written in the unique form of letters between a German and a Jew, it is one of the most stirring stories of the time.

Mrs. Taylor wrote it out of profound shock when she learned that one of her friends had gone to Germany and turned Nazi. She still believed in the ideals which she acquired during college.

Despite the sensational success of "Address Unknown," Mrs. Taylor believed that no career was as important or as satisfying as that of homemaking. She has three sons and a daughter. Her husband is now editorial director of "a trade paper in Gettysburg, Pennsylvania."

"I admire Kathrine Kressmann Taylor most because first of all she is a woman," W. F. G. Thacher, her former professor, said Thursday when Mrs. Taylor was visiting the journalism school.

And Mrs. Taylor is thoroughly feminine. Sitting across the booth at the Anchorage in a tailored chartreuse dress, a wide-brimmed brown hat over her blonde hair, smoking Parliament cigarettes, drinking black coffee, she was most striking, not as a prominent writer, but as a charming person to talk to.

But what happened to the young radical who wanted to change the world? She is still there. In her own way, more restrained, perhaps more conservative, Mrs. Taylor is still fighting for the same principles.

She still hates the sly half-truths of propagandists, even though it may appear the propaganda is not misdirected. She still believes in tolerance, in the rights of individuals to freedom and happiness—equally.

But Mrs. Taylor has learned many things since those bull-sessions in dormitory rooms twenty years ago.

"Progress is a slow thing," she said emphatically, looking at the tanned coeds giggling over cokes at the counter, "It moves by infinitesimal stages. We must not erase reforms, we must temper them. We cannot trade liberty for security. It is so difficult to draw a line, to find out how much we can do now so that in the long run our objectives will be reached."

In the academic world, the world of ideas, she asserted, it seemed to her at one time, that socialism was the answer. But when students "run into the practicalities of the brutal outside world" they are forced to realize that the changes must come slowly.

"A great many things we don't like, are necessary now. We must do our reforming without upsetting the equilibrium." Setting the world on fire will solve no problems. Problems, like the poor, we have always with us, she believes. Of primary importance is a true and factual knowledge of the problems, their source, their consequences. Then action must be taken to eliminate further danger to society. Lost generation?

Joe Conroy Chosen Newman Club Head

Joe Conroy, freshman in business administration was elected president of Newman club for the coming year at Tuesday's meeting at the Side. Donna O'Brien, freshman in music; Norma McKeegan, freshman in liberal arts and Norman Evonuk, junior in political science, were chosen vice president, secretary, and treasurer respectively.

Two new offices, publicity and social chairmanships, were added to the list of permanent positions in the organization. Kit Wilhelm was selected as publicity head. The social chairman will be chosen at a later date.

Conroy, a veteran of the eighth air force, started University winter term of this year. He has been active in Newman club activities since shortly after his arrival on the campus, and was made a member of the planning council, which regulates the group's affairs, early in winter term.

The first project of the new officers, who assume their duties immediately, will be a picnic at Fiji Meadows scheduled for Sunday, May 19. Final plans for the outing will be laid at the next meeting.

Father L. T. Eckstien, current chaplain, was guest speaker for the evening. His talk, followed by a short discussion, was on the subject of Extreme Unction.
