TOM KAY

Ex-infantryman Tom Kay, twice decorated for wounds received in Germany, is calmly awaiting what promises to be another tough battle, his fight for the ASUO presidency. Touted as one of the finest candidates ever to enter an ASUO race, Tom Kay was a unanimous choice.

As a staff sergeant in command of a machine-gun squad, Kay hit the Normandy beach with General Terry Allen's famed 104th infantry division in August, 1944, and participated in both the northern France and Ardennes campaigns. He was first wounded in Inden, Germany, early in December, 1944, and received his second major wound less than a month later during the battle of the bulge. Kay was discharged in December, 1945.

In seeking fair representation for all University students, Tom Kay is urging continued, strong support for the proposed student congress, as well as special concessions to married veterans regarding free admission for their wives to all student activities, and pressure for increased housing fa-

Eugene Highway Project Will Not Disrupt Mill Race

By Herb Penny

The University section of the mill race will not be affected by the junction project to be decided today at the polls by Eugene voters. The project calls for Eugene to take over the rights of the race from the Eugene Woolen Mills to use as a highway right-of-way.

Reassuring Webfoots who feared the loss of their "shady place," C. H. Koppe, president of the Woolen Mills, revealed Thursday that the plan calls for the race to be covered only from Broadway to the railway. The rest of the race will be kept alive, he said.

The proposal calls for a $500,000 bond issue for the city's share of financing the mill race project. Deane Seeger, Eugene city manager, has outlined the financial picture of the plan to the Eugene city council.

Independent Nominees Give Four Point Platform

By MARYANN THIELEN

GIL ROBERTS

Gil Roberts, Independent candidate for the position of ASOU president, outlined the four main planks in his platform Thursday as follows: 1) Construction of a student union building; 2) comprehensive building and housing program; 3) increased salaries for faculty members; 4) equal faculty-student representation on all committees and boards.

He believes that not only interest but progressive effort should be kept alive in the student union plan so that the long-dreamed of union building can materialize as soon as possible.

"I will do everything I can to call the governor's attention to our housing needs," Roberts said, "and to make him and other state officials realize that efficient students must have adequate living quarters."

Referring to his third point of increased salaries for faculty members, Roberts feels that more action would be taken by the governor and state officials if the student view were presented to them.

Roberts believes that the fac-

UO Vote-at-18 Committee Selected; Petition For Youth Vote Promoted

By Oliver Larson

Campus effort to grant voting privileges for the age-group between 18 and 21 was formally organized here yesterday when Monroe Sweetland, state organizer for the "Vote-at-18" committee conferred with local students interested in petitioning toward getting the new age amendment on the November election ballot.

The state committee confronts the imposing task of securing 23,103 signatures before July 3. Sweetland declared that the objective can be achieved if the young people themselves support the measure with sufficient zeal.

Monroe Sweetland is publisher of the Molalla Pioneer. He was one of a group of younger men recently under consideration as candidate for governor of Oregon, and has been active for several years in state political circles.

"College students are particularly interested in this measure," he stated, "because its passage will insure a much wider and more active interest in current affairs on the part of those young people now deprived of voting rights."

Sweetland pointed out the situation in Portland, where married couples with children could not vote in the school board election which selects directors with terms of four years.

The University committee is headed by Dale Harlan, Gamma hall president. Harlan announced that the male members of his "Vote-at-18" committee are all veterans over 21, however, he explained that he can use anyone interested in doing a little footwork for the project.

"It is not necessary that the petition circulators be registered voters over 21," explained Harlan.

Assisting Harlan on the local committee are: June Goetze, Ted Hallock, Oliver Larson, and Laura
