New Tempo of Hilarity Shown In Student-Produced Drama

"Good Night, Caroline," when presented Thursday afternoon and evening introduced a brand new tempo of hilarity which began with the opening lines, uncouth snores from the tired husband, Richard Schuchard.

Sound affects along the lines of sneezing, coughing and yawning coupled with the easily turned on oak from top to toe, Virginia Avery, expects to spend some time in the rest camp before it is completely cleared up. Listed for the beginning of the week are Ruth Harmon, Miriam Sullivan, Barbara Lucas, Gloria Mountjoy, Ruth Lee Robertson, Virginia Skow, Daniel Dinger, Joe Hall, Wally Heider, Jim McClintock, Frances Thorn, David Delano, and Bob Krause.

and off crying jags of Caroline, Estelle Shimshak, added to the humor of the plot. The gruffness of hard-boiled John McDonald as the burglar and the appearance of Carolyn Jenks as Selma, the maid, supported the wit.

Tief's Plan Altered

This bedroom scene drama is the story of a spoiled wife who comes face to face with a burglar intent upon "relieving the household of a few articles." The plot centers around her innocent line of chatter which dumbfounds the thief and changes his plans completely.

The first play in a number of years to be produced by University students, "Good Night, Caroline," lives up to the expectations of cast and director as being, "extremely witty, a good play to work with."
