Modern Pottery Exhibition Opened

The opening of an exhibition of contemporary California pottery has been announced by Dr. Wallace S. Baldinger, art exhibition chairman of the school of architecture and allied arts. Works of Gertrud and Otto Natzler, Martha Longnecker, and Marguerite Wilderhaim will be exhibited in the gallery in the art building.

The gallery will open Sunday and will remain open daily from 2 to 5 p.m. until November 2. Visitors will be able to purchase the pottery on exhibition at reasonable prices, Dr. Baldinger reports.

Mr. and Mrs. Natzler worked for six years in Vienna undertaking individual research and experiments, and have developed a highly personalized pottery which is immediately recognizable, according to Dr. Baldinger. Natzler pottery is known for its thinness and fineness of throwing and the beauty of shape and proportion.

Margurite Wilderhaim received training at Bauhaus in Weimar, Germany. Her work is a mark of grace, purity of taste, and ingenious by functional treatment in such things as the lips, spouts, and knobs, Dr. Baldinger said.

Martha Longnecker, a graduate of Scripps college, has worked in Claremont, Calif. She works in rough texture terra cotta with brilliant glazes.
