

Only Dead Ashes Left Of Klamath Falls Deal

Hot fires of last term's debate over the use of the marine barracks at Klamath Falls for a college educational center for Oregon veterans turned almost to dead ashes Monday when the state board of higher education decided it would not assume primary responsibility for the move. However, it might desire to lease part of it from the state board of education which decided last week to acquire the barracks if possible for a vocational school.

Dr. Paul C. Packer, chancellor, said the decision was made after studying a survey showing that most married veterans had obtained housing and that veterans' housing was still available at the Vanport center and the colleges of education.

Enrollments Soar

The present institutions, through emergency facilities, are handling enrollments totaling 16,298 or 128 per cent more than a year ago, according to figures submitted by Dr. Packer. He found that in addition to the vacant facilities at Vanport center and the colleges of education, more temporary housing space is under construction at Oregon State College and the University.

Dr. Packer reported that: "On the permanently established campuses, additional housing facilities for 1018 married and 2447 single students, messing facilities for 2110, and 165,093 additional square feet of emergency classroom and office space has been provided by the board."

Demands Studied

Since the last meeting of the board, Dr. Packer visited the Klamath Falls center and conducted a number of studies to determine what the possible demands on the institutions would be for the next two terms. He found by a sample survey that 83 per cent of the 1567 married veterans who could not obtain institutional housing at Eugene or Corvallis had been able to find their own housing at some institution. Of the 17 per cent remaining, 9 per cent, or about 140 married veterans, said they would be interested in going to Klamath Falls.

The present housing facilities are distinctly of an emergency nature, Dr. Packer told the board, with the exception of a dormitory at La Grande. He cautioned against considering these anything but a temporary solution of the housing problem. Dr. R. E. Kleinsorge, chairman of the building committee, urged the board to proceed with the permanent building program just as soon as possible, even at present high costs.

Arctic Scientists To Receive Money

Funds have been made available to the Arctic Institute of North America by which it is possible to offer two fellowships of $2000 each for scientific work in the Canadian Arctic or Subarctic during 1947.

Interested students are asked to see Dr. L. S. Cressman, anthropology department head.

The fellowships are open to anyone who has demonstrated his ability to carry out research work of superior quality in some field of science.

Applications must be received by November 1, 1946. Fellowships will be awarded on the recommendation of the Board of Governors of the Arctic Institute, and will be announced by February, 1947.

Eugene News Editor To Teach Copy Editing

Two sections of the copy-editing classes in the school of journalism will be taken over by Paul J. Deutschmann, news editor of the Eugene Register-Guard, George Turnbull, dean of the school, has announced.

The new appointment will make possible a three-hour laboratory period a week for each student, said Dean Turnbull.

Spokane Round Table Drops Cross Country

SPOKANE, Oct. 14—(AP)—The Spokane athletic round table announced today it was dropping the annual sponsorship of the Pacific coast intercollegiate cross country races this year because of insufficient interest in the event.

The announcement also pointed out that track coach Mike Ryan, formerly at the University of Idaho and an active worker for the event, has recently transferred to the University of Wyoming.

New Law Mentor Awaits Approval

Hugh Allan Smith is a new assistant professor of law subject to confirmation by the state board of higher education, Dean Orlando J. Hollis has announced.

The new law professor was graduated from the University of Santa Clara in 1939 and received his LL.B. degree from Harvard law school three years later. He is a member of the Oregon Bar association and the Harvard legal aid bureau.

His professional experience includes terms of service with the firm of Sullivan and Cromwell, New York City, from 1942 to 1945, and on the staff of the general council of the War Production board. He was counsel to the department administration of Civilian Production administration, Washington, D. C., from October, 1945, until he resigned to accept his position here.

Girls' Turn Out For 'Y' Groups

Nearly 200 freshman girls have turned out for the various commission groups sponsored by the YWCA, leaving very few posts open, according to Miss Lois Greenwood, executive director.

Their first project, with Pat Ebert in charge, is the "Y" concession at Homecoming. Commission leaders include: Martha Thorsland, Marge Skordahl, Barbara Borrevik, Barbara Johns, Bjorg Hansen, Alice May Robertson, Delores Ray, Geneva Davis, and Ann Burgess.

Sophomore commission officers are being elected this week.

Anyone interested should contact her immediately.

Poem Contest Ends In Early November

The national poetry association announced recently that November 5 would be the last day manuscripts could be turned in for entrance in the annual anthology of college poetry. Dennis Hartman, secretary for the association, stated that there are no charges for inclusion of verse in the Anthology and urged interested University students to take part in the contest.

Students entering the contest should address their work to the National Poetry Association, 3210 Selby avenue, Los Angeles 34, California and have it there by November 5. Name, home address and school that the student is attending must be included with each entry submitted.

Legal Eagles

(Continued from page five) won't order my boys to hold the score down as I did in our 13-12 victory over the dorm boys last week," beamed Curley, "and we'll be ready to go."

"It is doubtful that Coach Walker will play in the next game," added Head Trainer "Sparks" Helgeron, "as a result of his three minutes of running, blocking and brilliant passing he is suffering from complete internal exhaustion as well as a slight heart murmur."

"I will play too," gasped Curley, as he sank into a coma.

Ex-Student Edits Research Survey

Former psychology graduate assistant, Albert B. Blankenship, was appointed editor of the recently published book, "How to Conduct Consumer Opinion Research," a technical survey of public opinion in various business fields, Dr. H. R. Taylor, professor of psychology, said Monday.

Contributors from research departments throughout the country have contributed to the book. It contains questionnaires and polls on surveys of opinions.

Another former Oregon graduate assistant aiding in the survey, is Albert Campbell, who obtained his degree in psychology at the University of Oregon in 1939.
