

Ducks Get Final Drill; Leave Today at Noon

An injury plagued quarterback spot was Coach Tex Oliver's chief source of concern as the University of Oregon's Webfoots rounded out their final day of heavy drill in preparation for the Saturday tiff with Idaho.

Present Oregon traveling plans will find the Webfoots boarding a northbound train at noon today. The Ducks are scheduled to arrive in Portland this afternoon and they will workout on the Multnomah Civic Stadium turf. Though Oregon officials made no announcement of plans, the Ducks probably will have a stiff workout in Portland. Further plans will give the Oregon men a slight workout when they arrive in Idaho Friday.

Missing faces in last night's scrimmage session were those of Oregon's number one and two quarterbacks, Duke Iversen and Don Shaffer. Big Duke, who pulled a muscle in the Washington State game last Saturday, was definitely out of the Idaho clash when Duck officials announced that he would not make the trip.

Quarterback Don Shaffer was in doubtful shape because of a neck and cheek infection. Although Shaffer's condition has improved, and he is scheduled to make the trip to Moscow, how much he will play depends upon the amount of improvement that he shows.

Quarterback Bill Abbey, who has seen limited service thus far this season, will take over at the blocking back post for the Webfoots. Abbey, a 180 pound Klamath Falls lad, has been benched almost of the season with injuries but is expected to carry the brunt of the quarterbacking job Saturday. Behind Abbey will be 215 pound Jim Porter, who saw his first Oregon action as a member of the 1942 Frosh team.

Though the quarterback spot has been hard hit, the rest of the Oregon squad is in good condition. Seatback Jake Leicht, who injured a leg in the season opener, has been out to regular practice this week and is considered a sure bet to play. Leicht is considered one of the fastest backs on the Coast and is sure to be a thorn in the Vandal side if he does play.

Ducklings Drilling For SOCE Game

John Warren's JV squad began drilling for their November 1 game with the Southern Oregon College of Education at Ashland. The Jay-vee mentor paced his charges through some basic fundamentals, blocking and ball-handling.

Warren's two fullback hopes, Bill Bayless and George Bishop received injuries in last Friday night's tilt with the OSC JV's. Bayless sprained an ankle which should have benched him, but the big fullback was running through plays Wednesday showing no sign of a limp. Bishop, however, will be on the sidelines with a badly bruised leg.

No shakeups are expected in the line that started in last Friday's game. Bill Ferson, who was also injured slightly, is back in his guard position and ready to go.

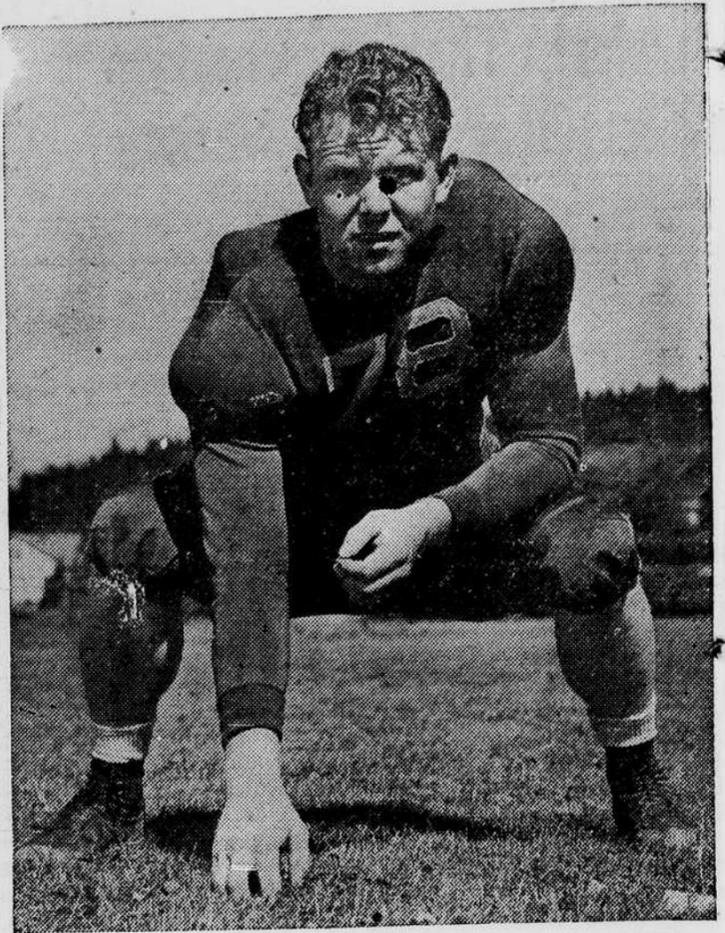

The SOCE team will trade blows with the OSC powerhouse this coming Saturday and all eyes will be turned towards Ashland in an effort to get some idea of what the southern school may have on tap.

According to the Oregon State Barometer, students are questioning the eligibility of certain players used by OSC in their impressive 48-6 victory over the Ducklings. Al Cox, OSC JV coach, explained that according to conference rules, players may be interchanged between both teams any time during the season.

Hey You Webfoots Team Goes Today

Hey, you Ducks! Get off your duff and take a look around! Your Webfoot team leaves at noon today for their fifth game of the season. According to the AP sports poll, Oregon ranked 19th nationally... something to cheer about, no kidding! If the Moscow venture turns out well, the Webfoots will journey south to meet USC undefeated in their first five games. Oregon is the only team in the entire Northern Division with an unblemished record.

Can we, as students, do any less than give a roaring, boisterous send-off to the team that has brought nation-wide recognition to the University of Oregon? You're darn right we can't! Let's see all you people with blood down at the depot at noon tomorrow to give the Webfoots a yell that will still be ringing in their ears when they face the hostile Idaho crowd in Saturday's game.

BURLY DUKE IVERSEN... will not be on the traveling squad that will entrain for Moscow, Idaho, today. Oregon's ace quarterback and linebacker pulled a muscle in his leg in the Washington State game and will lay off this week in order that he might be ready for the USC fray in Los Angeles November 2.

Six Intramural League Titles Cinched By Undefeated Teams

By ELWIN PAXON
 With the 1946 intramural football schedule barely past the two-thirds mark, six teams boast unblemished records, enabling them to hold undisputed possession of first place in their respective leagues.

Five of the clubs—Betas, Phi Delt, ATO, Sigma Nu, and the Legal Eagles—have racked up two victories against no defeats, while the SAEs were the winners in their only clash thus far.

As it appears now, a trio of these squads loom as the strongest contenders for the touch football crown. The Phi Delt has fielded a consistently strong aggregation, sparked by Kay Hoff, who is one of the most versatile ball-packers in the leagues. Not only is he an outstanding runner, but his passes are extremely effective and his punting ability has been of great value to the team. In the forward wall Right End Don McCallum and Guard Bill Hanna, have turned in good performances.

The mill-race Beta boys are second fiddle to no one, offensively or defensively, if past showings are any indication. They possess speed to burn in fleet-footed Bob Svenson and Rube Rubstello, a super end in Sheldon Jones, and Vic Smith is one of the toughest blocking backs in the circuit. The Beta line is rough and hard-charging, with Center Walt McKinney, an experienced man at guard, Larry Cramer, who consistently cracked the opposition. Last but not least, the Sigma Nu
