Dr. Moll Debarks; Excites Comment From Australians

Ernest G. Moll, professor of English at the University, has arrived in his homeland, Australia, according to the Sydney newspaper, the Morning Herald. Dr. Moll is spending his sabbatical leave from Oregon in Australia carrying on research for a long poem which will tell the history and development of the continent down under from the stone age until the present.

The Herald writes: "To dockside bystanders, Ernest George Moll looked more like a Spanish grandee than a professor and a poet, as he walked down the gangplank. But, for all his shaggy Vandyke beard, long black side levers, and sun-brown cheeks, he was a homesick Australian seeing his native land for the third time since he ran away from home a quarter of a century ago."

"He had a rich, drawling American accent, an American wife, a son at Harvard university, a home among the tall timbers of Oregon's central valley, a chair in English at the University of Oregon, but still, he claimed, he was as Australian as the plains on which he was born 46 years ago, and he had never given up his Australian citizenship."

While he is in Australia, Professor Moll will deliver two series of lectures at the University of Sydney, five lectures to be included in each series. One series will be presented in February and the other in May.

He will also deliver a speech at the annual dinner of the English association at the University of Sydney, on the topic, "Originality and the Poet."

'Dark of the Moon' Evokes Comment from Guild Head

University Players' Performance to Be First Amateur Showing Since N. Y. Run

By JOAN LOCHEAD

Leaning forward in a casual manner from his desk in the drama studio, Horace W. Robinson, director of University Guild productions, expressed his views on the coming production "Dark of the Moon."

While in the east last spring he watched the performances of over 100 stage plays and was most impressed with Richardson's and Birney's "Dark of the Moon" and Van Druten's "I Remember Mama." Upon his return to the Oregon campus, he wired the agents for the two plays with the intent of doing them in the future.

He was refused permission for Van Druten's play but the Shubert agent gave him the go ahead on "Dark of the Moon." Normally they do not deal with amateur groups and the University Guild theater will be the first amateur theater group in the country to do the play after its New York run.

Carol Stone, of the famous Stone family of the stage, offered a very sympathetic performance at the preview in Iowa, and agents agreed it would be a success on the eastern stages.

Shubert's agents have been especially cooperative in connection with background material, having mailed several photostatic copies of folk songs to be used in the play to add a haunting theme.

Robinson stressed the fact that the theater guild is now producing more plays than ever before. This can be attributed to the larger enrollment and also to the fact that "we are in a revolutionary period of the theater." People have seen so many motion pictures that they are now turning to the stage for entertainment. "Dark of the Moon" is a play of interest to young and old, not just a theatrical production. "It will prove stimulating and exciting to college students," said Robinson.

Exec Group Holds Regular Meeting

ASUO executive council voted Tuesday to pay all expenses incurred by the three OSC rally squad members who will appear at the ASUO assembly this Thursday.

Moved by Laura Olson, sophomore representative, the recommendation was seconded by Bea King, AWS president, and agreed to unanimously by the council.

Also approved was a recommendation from Les Anderson, alumni secretary, that the Oregon Federation chairman be appointed through the executive council. ASUO President Tom Kay reported that funds are available for the Federation for three years and that the chairman appointed by this council would remain only until next fall.

Denied was a petition by J. El. Rooney, alumnus, for official recognition as a member of the 1943 tennis team. Vice President Gil Roberts moved the denial on the grounds that there was not sufficient competition to warrant the award of the Varsity "O." Marguerite Wittwer-Wright, Emerald editor, seconded the motion and the board agreed.

County Clerk Explains Denial of Voting Rights

Deputy County Clerk Lloyd Howe announced last week that students who registered on the campus to vote in the national election, and were denied that privilege, were kept from voting because of their failure to sign the registration cards or because they had previously registered in other states and had not cancelled that registration. It was estimated by Howe that some 400 of those who did register voted on the first Tuesday in November.

Return of Signs Asked

Traffic signs which have been situated at the intersections of University and Thirteenth, Alder and Thirteenth have been stolen. The University requests that these signs, cautioning cars to slow down while driving through the campus be returned immediately. They were purchased by the city of Eugene and replacements are not available.
