

Extension System Geared For Statewide Operation

"The State is the Campus." This motto expresses the purpose of the general extension service of Oregon in pushing an educational program beyond the boundaries of the five centralized campuses in the state, bringing opportunities for higher learning within the reach of every citizen of Oregon.

Acting as the hub of a statewide wheel of learning, the division provides the advantages of class-directed higher education to thousands of citizens who have never visited one of the campuses.

Claim 775 Enrollment

In 16 cities throughout Oregon, excluding the Portland center, approximately 775 Oregonians attend 46 classes weekly, the courses ranging from art to zoology. All institutions of higher education in the state contribute instructors and material for these classes, sponsored throughout the state by the general extension division. The extension office here in Eugene serves as headquarters for the far-flung system of classes.

Classes can be organized by any group in Oregon which furnishes meeting space and assures adequate enrollment. The classes meet at the convenience of the group and instructors, usually in the evening. Eugene claims 20 night classes given here on the campus during each week.

Open to Anyone

These state-wide classes are open to anyone, from students working toward a degree to persons attending class for their own enjoyment and interest. College or university credit is given those who complete courses with a final examination.

GAX Apple Sale Starts Next Week

Freshman women will take charge of the Gamma Alpha Chi apple booths. These will be located at the art school patio, the Side, the Cop, Friendly hall, the Falcon, and the library for the two-day sale starting November 25, Joan Mimmnaugh, booth chairman, has announced. Selling will be from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. each day.

Surplus apples will be sold in living organizations Tuesday through representatives appointed by Diana Dye, house sales chairman. To remind eager apple-eaters of the coming event, posters will be displayed on the campus this week.

A noon meeting of Gamma Alpha Chi officers and committee heads is scheduled Thursday at Renell's for final organization plans.

Journalism School Tops KOAC Show

This week's campus headlines, broadcast over KOAC from 9 to 9:30 p.m. this evening, will relate the story of the University of Oregon school of journalism.

George S. Turnbull, dean of the school, will participate in the broadcast in the role of the story-teller, providing a glance into the newspaperman's life.

The script, written by Marvin Krenk, director of the station, will center around Eric W. Allen, former dean of the journalism school, who died March 5, 1944. It will describe Dean Allen's efforts, over a period of 32 years, to make the school one of high national reputation.

The cast includes Ted Hallock, Manuel Golemis, John MacDonald, Ken Lomax, Lee Petrsek, Virginia Avery, Ted Bouck, Ray Ryman, Don Moss, Dick Shelton, Ray Dedman, and Don Stewart. Paul Marcotte will be director.

The program will be rebroadcast for the Portland audience over station KEX from 9:30 to 10 p.m. Thursday evening.
