

Book-Cracking Now in Order

About this stage in the game of cutting classes and never cracking a book, a warning bell rings. Bang, it hits you, just like that. And the unsuspecting, contented (like the cows at OAC) student opens his mouth and bellows, like a cow that ain't contented no more: "Ye gods, finals in two weeks!"

It hits you like a ton of very wet cement, like a short jab to the solar plexus. That one word is potent enough to sour the cream in your cupacawfee.

The sickening feeling in the pit of the stomach (where it felt so good last Thursday) grows as you start counting up on your fingers the exam schedule. The more you think of it, the more you'd like to comit mayhem on whoever figured out the deal. Either he totes a golden key or never had final exams slated for 8, 9, and 10 on a Monday morning. And just think, all this comes free on the GI bill too.

And these profs that give two hour exams. They can't seem to remember the deal is optional. Then there is the prof that wants to make you feel better and he sticks his thumbs in his vest and says in a knowing tone, "Oh, well, you know, grades don't mean anything anyway."

"Oh yeah," you mentally glare back, "and just how do you think I got that '2.00' stamped on my hexigraph?"

That'd be a good one for him to theorize on for awhile.

This is the time of year when an organizer for the Society for the Abolition of Final Examinations really could gather the supporters. Or how about the abolition of professors and let Father Pioneer run the joint?

UW President Travels

SEATTLE, Dec. 3 — (AP)— President Raymond B. Allen of the University of Washington went to Yakima today to address the Washington horticultural association and was to fly from there to Eugene, Ore., tomorrow to talk before the Northwest Association of Secondary and Higher Schools. Several other Washington faculty members will also attend the Eugene conference.

Class Time Changed

Because of the concert Thursday evening the class in advanced short story writing will be held this evening at the same hour and room.

Dads' Day Petitions Accepted Until Dec. 16

Petitions for position as chairman for Dads' day will be accepted in the student body president's office in McArthur court until December 16, Tom Kay, ASUO president, announced Tuesday.

The executive council will select the chairman before the end of this term.

Dad's day will be held February 15, winter term.

Choral Club Plans For Winter Concert

Eugene's Women's Choral club will present its winter concert in McArthur court, December 10, at 8:15 p.m., Maud Densmore, president of the group, announced Wednesday.

Proceeds from this benefit concert will go towards the Densmore scholarship in music at the University, to be awarded to the winning high school senior competing in the scholarship contest to be held in June of next year.

Oregon students will be admitted on their student body cards and regular admission for townspeople will be 60 cents.

The women's Choral club presents two concerts each year: the Christmas concert in December, and the spring concert in May.

Browns Beat Miami

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 3—(AP)— The powerful Cleveland Browns of the All-American football conference staged a great show of speed and precision as they downed the Miami Seahawks, 34-0 before 9,083 paid spectators in the Orange Bowl stadium gusty, showery weather here tonight.

Radio to Feature Historical Drama

KOAC will present an historical drama of Thomas Condon's geological exploration of Oregon, at 9 p.m. tonight on the Campus Headlines show.

Thomas Condon built the famous Oregon collection now housed in the Museum of Natural Science on the campus. This and other events concerning his life as a missionary and his affiliation with major geological scientists of the nation will be accurately presented by an all student cast. The producer of the Campus Headlines show is John MacDonald and the script was written by Marvin Krenk, University radio production director.

This same program will be transcribed Thursday, December 5, at 9:30 p.m. over radio station KEX in Portland.

The student union drive is underway.
