Geography Closed For Winter Term

All courses in the geography department for winter term are filled to capacity and several sections are closed, according to Dr. W. D. Smith, head of the geology and geography department.

The largest class in this department is introduction to geography, taught by Professor J. C. Stovall, assistant professor. About 450 students are registered in the two sections of Introduction.

Dr. Smith commented yesterday, "The University didn't include any courses in geography until recent years, and now the present situation shows that now there isn't room for all who want to take them."

Seniors Given Photo Deadline

An exception to the regular deadline rule for individual Oregoniana pictures was announced Tuesday by Trudi Chernis, associate editor. All seniors who expect to be graduated this coming June, and who were not photographed during fall term, may have their pictures taken any time Saturday morning, January 11, at the Kennell-Ellis studios.

The usual charge of 50 cents for two poses or 75 cents for four will be made. Proofs must be picked up on Tuesday, January 14, and returned the following day. In the event that proofs are not called for, Kennell-Ellis will select the picture to be printed.

Miss Chernis explained that this departure from the regular schedule is being made to give new seniors an opportunity to be included in the 1947 Oregoniana.

She also reported that more than 5,000 individual pictures are now being processed at the Oregoniana offices. This represents an all-time high, and more than twice the number handled last year.

Go put your creed into your deed. —Emerson.
