Artists Watch As Painters Work

Students in some of the drafting rooms over at the art school were having trouble with painters this week, but not art school painters.

The drafting rooms were slated for a repaint job during Christmas vacation, but the men with the paint brushes were still brushing this week. Consequently, while painters slapped paint on one section, students huddled in alternate corners.

Also in on the art school's face-lifting program were the library, which received new lighting fixtures, and Dean Little's office which was enlarged. Eight new staff offices were also set up.
