

Editing Class Airs Polish Discussion

The Polish election question was aired Monday night over KOAC by members of the senior editing class taught by George S. Turnbull, dean of the journalism school. The broadcast was the first in a series on problems affecting world peace, with emphasis on the various ideologies coming into play in world problems.

Vernon White, Winifred Romtvedt, and LeJeune W. Griffith discussed the Polish election, including the possible underlying motives of the Russian government in their reported attempts at interference.

A Thursday night broadcast over KORE is being readied by other members of the editing class to open a series of programs on historical figures in journalism.

John Peter Zenger, pre-revolutionary publisher who was involved in the first American case of freedom of the press, will be the topic of discussion Thursday at 8:15 p.m. over KORE by Rusty Sparks, Donald McIntosh, Lester Schlangen, and Sidney Seymour.

Wednesday Deadline For Service Petitions

Wednesday is the deadline for filing petitions for the members of the administrative committee which will direct the World Student Service fund drive.

Petitions should be turned in to Tom Hazzard, general chairman of the drive, at Westminster house or the Alpha Tau Omega house.

The drive will be conducted February three to seven.

Storm Delays Mentor

Gordan Wright, assistant professor of history now on leave, did not return to the campus Monday as scheduled because of a storm which delayed the S. S. America on which he was returning from Paris. Dr. Wright has cabled Dan Clark, head of the history department, that he will be back at the University the latter part of the week.
