

Magazine Carries Dr. Wood's Article

The lead article in the December issue of the Journal of Speech Disorders, published by the American Speech Correction association, was written by Dr. Kenneth S. Wood. Wood is assistant professor of speech and drama, and director of the speech correction and hearing clinic at the University.

In analyzing the causes of speech defects in children, Dr. Wood writes that children learn speech as part of their total adjustment pattern. "Parental adjustment is not only a prerequisite for normal speech development in the child, but it is a prerequisite for successful treatment of the child in the clinic," he said.

Fifty children were screened from the Eugene public schools, and given the tests over a two-year period. The children were normal in every respect except for their speech deficiencies, the article stated.

Then parents were given a series of tests to determine the effect of maladjusted parents on speech development of the children. Results showed the parents to be "significantly lower in self-adjustment, social adjustment, and total adjustment than the group of 250 adults upon whom the test was standardized."

The first intercollegiate athletic activities at the University of Oregon took place in the early 1890's. Debating contests were much more popular with the students.

already underway to nominate their football star, "Crazylegs" Carmichael for the highest honor the school can bestow . . . that of being "Law School Queen" for their annual weekend. When asked to confirm or deny the rumor, Mr. Carmichael disdainfully belched and retired. We'll have more on that next week. First project for the year should be installing a new P. A. system in the Igloo. The fiasco of last Friday night should stimulate some kind of action, as not only were the entertainers embarrassed, Coach Aiken was caught in the middle, and many dimes stayed in pockets where they should have gone to the March of Dimes fund. The Theta Chi quartet of Gene Hebrard, Bill Pengra, Glenn Snyder and Lowell Chase did the best they could with a lousy mike setup. The whooping and hollering from the men's side didn't help much when a young thing in pink sauntered in. Hazzard did his best in an awkward situation that should be remedied. Congratulations to all the guys that changed their pledge pins to the real thing over the weekend. The newly initiated ATO's roar can be heard clear down to the Frye Hotel.

to the placement service by filing proper credentials with them, including letters of recommendation and accounts of previous experience. From these lists the business representatives pick the applicants whom they wish to interview for placement with their companies, he said.

Qualifications Considered

He advised that the applicant contact the placement office for background material concerning the business of his prospective employer, and from this decide beforehand what qualifications he has to offer.

"Students often come into the interview cold, and know little about the work they are interviewed for," Onthank said. "As a result they fail to present themselves in as favorable a light as possible."

The dean urged that graduating students consult their major professors regarding future employment, since many of these instructors have close connections with business concerns in their field.
