

JVs Pluck Eagles 50-45

Ken Seeborg Leads Scoring With 14 Points; Bocchi Has 13

By DON FAIR

Exploding in their usual fashion in the last three minutes, the JV cagers won a 50-45 nod from the stubborn Eagles in city league play at McArthur court last night. The win tied the two teams for first slot in the standings, both with six wins and two losses.

With Kenny Seeborg back in the lineup, following a week lay-up due to a pulled leg muscle, the Oregon quint looked perkier than they have in several games. It was their first win in the last four tilts.

It wasn't until 11 minutes were gone in the final half and the Eagles holding a 38-30 lead that the locals started coming. Jim Bocchi, who also had a hot evening, opened the drive with a cripple and followed this with a gift shot.

JVs Cut Gap

Seeborg's bucket from dead in the corner cut the gap to 38-35 but Howie Applegate's free toss lengthened the Eagle lead to four points. Bocchi let fly with another one, this from 25 feet out and it spliced through.

Still fighting, Jannum of the Eagles pocketed a cripple. Ed Devaney nullified this with a 20-footer to make the score 41-39 against the JVs. Coming up with his sixth basket of the evening, Seeborg knotted the count 41-all. Applegate's long one-hander however kept the Eagles out in front.

Jerry Switzer on an under-the-basket-scramble again tied it 43-all. Bocchi's long looper which bounced in and Seeborg's lefty shot from the corner gave the JVs a commanding 47-43 edge. Lee Wimberly dumped one in to make the margin 47-45, but charities by Switzer, Bob Don and Bocchi clinched the decision.

Eagles Start Slow

In the earlier stages of the court battle, the two teams swapped baskets with the JVs finally taking a 9-7 lead on a quick dash down floor by Bocchi. They jumped this to 15-7 before the Eagles found the range.

Coming up fast in the last five minutes of the first half, the Eagles finally regained the edge 21-20 at halftime on "Red" Maxwell's tip-in. They kept adding to this until the late Oregon rally squelched their hopes.

Seeborg with 14 and Bocchi at 13 applied the spark to the local's offense. For the Eagles, Chuck Taylor, who was clipping the twine from any and all angles, was high man with 15.

Midway in the final stanza, Lynn Hamilton, local forward, cracked his knee on the floor, dislocating it temporarily. However he was up and walking on it before the game's close.

Tomorrow night at 7 p. m. the Oregon quintet will tackle the Coos Bay Pirates.

Duck Paddlers Slate Beavers

A return meet with Oregon State in the Ducks pool is slated for Saturday afternoon and the Oregon paddlers are heavy favorites to administer another sound thumping to their Corvallis rivals.

Score in the last contest showed a 59-16 bulge for the University stroker. Oregon times recorded in the Washington meet indicate another thorough dunking for the Beavers. Several of the men posted their best times of the season last Saturday night, even though the red-hot Huskies walked away with scoring honors.

Swimmers Work Hard

Five members of the squad have churned approximately one and one-half miles daily for the past few afternoons. In order to be in top shape in the race for title honors. The four freestylers and one backstroker working out are: Bob Hiatt, Alden Sundlie, Don Rush, George Moorhead, and Earl Walters.

Backstroker Johnny Miller has shown steady improvement in the past two ND meets and in his daily training grind. Bill Seal, number two breastroker, is churning his lengths with the idea of renewing his duel with George Lipp, top Aggie contender.

Webfoot Cage Crew Given Rest Prior to Beaver Onslaught

Coach Hobby Hobson's Webfoot cagers took a well-deserved rest yesterday following the two-game Washington series but will return to the court for a stiff workout this afternoon in anticipation of Saturday night's Oregon State struggle at Corvallis. It will mark the third 1947 meeting for the two teams, the Beavers coming out on the long end of both contests.

The lemon and green hoop situation looks much improved following Tuesday night's sparkling win over the Huskies. Especially encouraging were the performances of Forward Ed Dick and Center Ken Hays, both of whom racked up 15 points apiece in downing the Seattle quintet.

The work of Forward Jim Bartelt also drew notice as the husky forward showed evidences of returning to form. Bartelt did not join the team until the pre-season schedule was completed. When teamed with Dick Wilkins at the other forward and Hays at center, shades of Oregon's 1945 Far-Western NCAA championship quintet present themselves. This three along with Bob Hamilton and Del Smith were starters on that team.

Reedie Berg at the guard spot gave a creditable performance and may have cinched a starting berth for Saturday night's Aggie battle. Berg at 6-2 is tall for a Hobson guard and is perhaps the tallest to play at that spot for Hobby since Vic Townsend of pre-war years.

With 10 northern division games now under their belts the Ducks have amassed a total of 535 points as against 537 for their opponents. Leading the Webfoot brood is the Mighty Mite, Stan Williamson, Hoop Review...

He's from South Dakota but you can thank Coach Howard Hobson and the famed Oregon "Alleycats" for Reedy Berg's appearance on the Oregon campus.

"Basketball lured me out here," commented the affable hoopster. I read about the famed Oregon teams when I was in grade school and was so impressed with their record that I decided if I ever had a chance to play ball it would be for the Webfoots and Howard Hobson."

The Oregon victory over Washington Tuesday night wasn't just a fluke, according to Berg, for he contends that the home quint is on the comeback trail.

Reedy Berg

"Oregon State has a terrific team, but I think we can beat them this week," was his answer when asked about the coming game with the Aggies. "I think they are the best team that we have met this year, but we will stop them if we play ball the way we can," he added.

The Beavers have a top ball club, true, but the Oregon guard said he figures Williamson is the best individual player in the conference.

Coach Hobson noted in his speech at the Igloo Sunday evening, that one of the reasons the team hasn't lived up to expectations can be attributed to their desire to uphold pre-season ratings. Reedy said that he thought this was very true, and that he had seen tenseness among team members because each player was trying to live up to their world-beating reputation.

He is a pre-law major and would normally enroll in the law school next fall, but now he isn't sure when he will start the grind. He hasn't decided between basketball and the law school and one must go.

The guard that Reedy wears on his leg in every ball game is to protect an old leg injury. Several year ago a portion of bone on the injured leg had to be cut away and the ever-present pad is protection against flying legs.
