

Odeon Contest Literary Work Due March 17

Literary contributions for Oregon's fifth Odeon, to be held April 27, are to be turned in to Professor R. D. Horn's office in 17 Friendly hall by March 17, it was announced by Beverly Slaney, co-chairman of the show. There are no mechanical restrictions on the material, and students are encouraged to submit short stories, plays, poems, essays, or any original material. A 30-page booklet will be compiled for the annual creative art show, and will feature these student contributions.

Plans for the 1947 show, which recognizes and furthers all creative work done by students in the fields of art, music, and literature, are being formulated this term, Miss Slaney said, and the University is promised a more complete show than was presented during the war years. Photography will be exhibited for the first time in Odeon's history this year.

The yearly show at the music school will be held during the scheduled Sunday afternoon, and the art school will be host to visitors both at the Little Art

Chapel Discussion Slated For Sunday

By JUNE McCONNELL

A program that would regularly bring outstanding religious leaders to the campus and eventually develop into a University chapel project, was the hope expressed by William Tugman, managing editor of the Eugene Register-Guard, in an interview yesterday. Tugman will discuss his ideas on this subject more fully Sunday night when he meets with the College Supper group of the Congregational church at 6 p. m.

For several years the Eugene editor has been active in the proposed plan of building a chapel in the center of the present I. O. O. F. cemetery, for the use of University students.

Tugman explained that there is a cleared plot of 125 square feet of land that would make an ideal spot for such a structure and a memorial park. "Of course such a plan takes time and it might be a few years before our plan could be fully realized," he said.

Reminiscing about his college days at Harvard, the editor told about the the university chapel services that they have there, and the nonsectarian services that the students may attend if they wish to. "I have heard some outstanding men speak there and have had the opportunity to talk individually to them," Tugman remarked, and it seems to me, that a plan under similar lines, could be worked out for Oregon students in the near future, if they desire it."

All students are invited to attend the Sunday evening supper and discussion. Charge for the supper is 35 cents.

Six Pledging Mu Phi

Nu chapter of Mu Phi Epsilon, national women's professional music sorority, has announced the pledging of six girls.

They are Lucretia Prentiss, Eleanor Sakrison, Reitha Bauman, La Trelle McCall, Janet Kelsey, and Ann Whitaker.

The formal pledging ceremony will be held February 18 at 7 p.m. in Gerlinger hall.

Pamphlet Lists Overseas Jobs

Although there is a great demand for college and University graduates in the field of foreign trade, statistics quoted in an occupational brief prepared by Western Personnel Institute indicate that few applicants for jobs with foreign branches of American business concerns are able to measure up to the requirements which such positions demand.

The publication recently received by the University student placement bureau, states that a canvass of several large companies revealed an anticipated increase in foreign staffs ranging from one-fourth to four times their pre-war figures, but to date more than 98 per cent of applicants for these jobs were washed out in the first interview.

Qualifications for jobs in the foreign trade field are not the result of training alone, according to the pamphlet.

"It is what a person is that determines success, not the 'tricks of the trade' which he may or may not know. The resourcefulness and adaptive capacity of an individual are more important than all the training that can be poured into him," the publication declares.

Information concerning the living conditions, salaries, problems to be met by workers in foreign locations, and personal requirements for careers in foreign trade are brought out in this circular. Students interested in this information can obtain the foreign trade occupational brief from Karl W. Onthank's office in room 6 Friendly.
