Arrangements Made for Film

Eddie Albert productions of Hollywood will produce the University of Oregon's educational motion picture on human growth and reproduction, it was disclosed last week by Dr. Lester F. Beck, associate professor of psychology.

News that the prominent producer had undertaken the production of the film was made known at an advance campus showing of the experimental slide-sound version before a group of Eugene educators. Dr. Beck, film director for the E. C. Brown trust fund which sponsors the film, has just returned from Hollywood, where final arrangements were made for the production.

Prepared to serve as a visual aid and to implement certain portions of Oregon's public school health instruction program, the film is to be a 16-mm. colored sound production. It will be used to supplement the manual for health instruction now in use at the seventh grade level in the secondary schools. This manual was prepared by Howard S. Hoyman, associate professor of physical education.

The finished film will be ready for a premier showing on the University campus in June, Dr. Beck related.

Background of the instructional work in Oregon's health program that has made possible the preparation and production of such a film was explained at the Wednesday night showing by Mrs. George Moorhead, field secretary of the E. C. Brown trust fund. Mrs. Moorhead pointed out the unusual setup of the state joint committee which is composed of staff members of the state department of education, the state board of health, and the state system of higher education.

In no other state, she said, do you have the unique situation of the state system of higher education playing so important a part in the development of the program of physical health and education in the secondary school system.

Dr. E. C. Brown, Portland physician, died in 1939, and by his will established the E. C. Brown trust fund, which was for the development of social hygiene education for the youth of Oregon. His will named as director of the trust the president of the University of Oregon.

Early established as a policy in administering the trust was the development of social hygiene in the state on a scientific rather than a sentimental basis. Dr. Adolph Weinzirl, named director of the trust, this program has been developed.

Comments following a showing of the film last Wednesday night were enthusiastic.

"It fills a definite need in health instruction in Oregon," was the opinion of Dr. Ralph W. Leighton, dean of the University school of physical education. Continuing, he said, "It has been extremely well-handled and even in the controversial area which it encompasses it will give less trouble than numerous other subjects because of the care with which it has been planned. Dr. Beck has done an excellent job."

Dr. Leighton pointed out that there is nothing else of this type in the educational field.
