

Local Phi Kappa Group To Petition for Charter

Officers of the newly organized Phi Kappa club, which is planning to petition the national Phi Kappa Sigma social fraternity for permission to establish a chapter at Oregon, were elected recently at the home of Dr. Frank G. Black, associate professor of English.

The officers include William D. Anderson, a transfer from the University of Washington, president; Robert Reeves, first vice-president; James Cassell, second vice-president; Ben H. Tooze, social chairman; Robert Goffard, secretary; Vernon Flake, treasurer; Arthur B. Elbon Jr., scribe; and Michael Zivic, sergeant-at-arms.

Pledges Listed

Men pledging the club are Jack C. O'Dell, Robert O. Reeves, Arthur B. Elbon Jr., Ben H. Tooze, Alan L. Zufflueh, Charles M. Green, Michael T. Zivic, Vernon H. Flake, James Cassell, Robert G.

Goffard, James W. Pratt, Robert M. Allen, Kenneth Larson, Peter D. Zupan, and Donald M. Cassell.

Action on applications from other men who have announced their desire for membership will be taken at the next meeting.

Dale Anderson, president of the group, is now drawing up the constitution and objectives of the new club for presentation to the student affairs committee.

The club plans eventually to build a chapter house on the campus.

Intolerant Americans

Americans are much more intolerant toward the Jews than are the English, who have always maintained a more liberal attitude, Churchill asserted.

He explained that the Arabs and the Jews had lived together peacefully until more Jews came in and the Arabs saw that they would be outnumbered.

"Only a minority of the Jews exhibit nationalistic and aggressive tendencies," Churchill said.

He explained that there are many more empires than the British, but that the Americans seem to object only to the British. He termed the American attitude a "guilt complex about empires."

English Pilgrims

Had the Pilgrims been non-Imperialistic they would never have landed in a country that already belonged to another people, he said. "But the Pilgrim fathers were made of sterner stuff; they were Englishmen," Churchill explained.

"What has happened to the original inhabitants of the country? Where are they?" he asked.

Churchill termed the United States the "star pupil in the class" taking lessons from England in government, but advised Americans to take post-graduate courses since other British proteges are quickly catching up.

The British theory of government, he said, is to combine empire with liberty.

Indian Query

In a heated question and answer period following the speech, Churchill flayed the anti-British attitude to the Egyptian question, in answer to a query concerning this posed by an Egyptian University student.

Churchill asked the audience what would have been the fate of Egypt had not "British blood been spilt at El Alamein." He further cited the treaty of 1936 in which the British had waived the provision demanding that the Egyptians maintain camps on the Suez canal for British troops, and the Empire had erected these camps themselves. From these two instances, Churchill forcefully expressed the belief that Britain had every right to keep troops in Egypt.

Churchill was introduced by Dr. Harry K. Newburn, University president.

Sylvia Killman, junior in music, played two piano solos, "Gardens in the Rain" and "More Than Slow Waltz."
