

Competition Set For Chessman

The University chess club will get its first taste of competition tonight at 7:30 p.m. when it meets the Eugene city chess club at the YMCA located in the Community Center. Eight games are scheduled.

Roy Copping, the Eugene club's number one man, will play against the University champion, Hugh Noland. Other matches are: Dr. L. E. George vs. George Swift; L. Howe vs. Ted Odland; Fred C. Craffs vs. Robert Wilhelmi; O. N. Hult vs. Shubert Fendrich; S. Aalto vs. John E. Laxson; James Olsen vs. Jim Calhoun; and Dale Rumford vs. Ralph Osburn.

Alternates for the University will be Robert Hollis and Frank Quinn.

The chess club has announced that a new class for beginning chess players has been organized and is meeting every Tuesday at 7 p.m. in Room 207 Chapman hall.

These classes are open to all University students, in an effort to increase the club's enrollment. The class is designed to teach those who have never played chess before to play well enough to contest the average club player. The basic principles of the opening, middle game, and ending are being discussed by George Swift, the club tournament director.

Until beginners have learned a few of the advanced fundamentals, they will not be required to play the advanced club players or to enter their names on the club rating system.

Students are urged by Swift to join the class soon before the instruction becomes too advanced.

Camp Directors Slate

Summer camp directors from all over the state will be on the campus February 20 to interview students interested in camp counselling positions next summer.

Representing such organizations as the Girl Scouts, Boy Scouts, Camp Fire Girls, and YWCA groups, the directors will hold a general meeting at 7:30 p.m. in 101 physical education.

Any students interested are invited to attend the meeting.

In 1915, California and Stanford had only Rugby football teams.

UO Coeds Named On Mlle. Board

Four girls represent Oregon on the 1947 Board of "Mademoiselle," popular women's magazine. Armintha Moores, Jane Ellsworth, Nila Desinger, and Beth Basler are working on the third of four monthly assignments issued to board members which serve to keep the magazine in touch with trends of fashion, thought, and interest in current affairs on the campuses over the nation.

Objective of college board members is the experience of a month's work in the New York offices of the magazine as guest editors of the August college issue of the magazine and participation in the first annual career conference. Twenty girls will be chosen on a competitive basis for this honor, traveling to New York with all expenses paid.

Campus representative of Mademoiselle, Miss Betty Claire Schmid, interviewed campus board members on the campus in a recent visit. She explained the opportunities this work offers to girls interested in furthering their careers.

All material contributed for publication, if used, is paid for. The current month's assignment contains a questionnaire concerning campus fashion trends, personal interests, what college women would like to see in the magazine, and ideas on career and family life.

The first inter-collegiate athletic activities at the University of Oregon took place in the early 1890's. Debating contests were much more popular with the students.
