

AWS, YWCA, WAA to Elect New Officers

Assembly Tomorrow Scheduled at 12:30

Tomorrow is ladies' day on the campus, as the Associated Women Students, the YWCA, and WAA present their annual election assembly, followed by voting. The assembly begins at Gerlinger promptly at 12:30, with balloting from 1 to 5.

Candidates will not be announced or even known to themselves until the time of the assembly to give each candidate an equal opportunity. For this reason, all women are asked to attend the pre-voting assembly.

No Speeches

At the time the candidates' names are announced those present will be introduced to the assembly. No speeches will be made.

The AWS officers elected tomorrow will carry out next year the plans laid by this year's cabinet in its reorganization program. The work of the present officers has been mainly to contact similar groups on other campuses and plan among themselves suitable activities and projects for succeeding years.

This work has been carried on this year by AWS President Bea King, aided by Dorothy Davis, vice-president; Barbara Johns, secretary; Mickey Metcalf, fall term treasurer; Ann Burgess, winter term treasurer; Trudi Chernis, reporter; and Prudy McCroskey, sergeant-at-arms.

YWCA Officers

YWCA offices to be filled include president, vice president, secretary, and treasurer. Present officers are Marge Skordahl, Martha Thorsland, Beryl Howard, and Nila Desinger.

These officers act as the governing body of the cabinet, which includes the leaders of all the activities offered by the YWCA.

Only YWCA members will be allowed to vote for these officers.

The UO fellowship will conduct two Bible studies Thursday from 8 to 9 a.m. in the men's lounge of Gerlinger hall and in the committee room of the campus YMCA from 11 to 11:50 a.m.

Patients' Tender Ode Kicked Backed by Doc

Last week two patient patients of the infirmary, Phyllis Potter, freshman in liberal arts, and Robbie Mulkey, sophomore in physical education, were nearing the discharge stage. To say farewell and offer a general opinion of the infirmary, they wrote a poem dedicated to the nurses and doctors. The authors fittingly titled it "Such a Life."

In response to this literary showing, Dr. Fred Miller, head man of the health service, composed an answer titled, "The Doctor Talks Back."

Occidental Customs, Language Enliven 'Yellow Jacket' Drama

The strangeness of the oriental theater when viewed by occidental standards is bound to make "The Yellow Jacket" an amusing and unusual evening of entertainment, Alan Foster, who plays the hero Wu Hoo Git, predicted yesterday.

As examples of the strange manner of the Chinese theater, Foster cited the practice of assuming the character of the role after entrance into the scene has been made and dropping out of character before completing an exit. Characters never leave the stage by the same opening through which they enter.

"One of the hardest things for for the actor is the flowery, elaborate language," said Foster. "Take for example Wu Hoo Git's speech to Plum Blossom in which he says, 'My ladder is love-woven and each rung is a love-strand upon which the humblest may tiptoe to heaven.'"

Foster said his fight in the play with Yin Suey Gong is a great deal of fun, because it is done in the Chinese manner with two-handed swords which "never touch but seem to touch."

Roles calling for a versatile actor are right up Foster's alley, whether they be a witch boy "a-longin' to be human" as in "Dark of the Moon"; a "hero of the Wu family" searching for his ancestral throne in "The Yellow Jacket"; or Quiz West, the soldier-hero of "The Eve of St. Mark."

Foster, who is a drama major and affiliated with Phi Gamma Delta, graduates this June, after which he plans to head for New York with James Bronson, another graduating drama major. They intend to try their luck in summer stock, and hope to go abroad later for study—probably to England.

Aside from the theater, Foster's interests run to hunting, horses, and dogs. During his service in Germany, he hunted deer and elk with the help of the traditional European "beaters." In Mannheim he got a prize dachshund, which he shipped back to his California home.

"The Yellow Jacket" opens March 6 under the direction of Mrs. Ottilie T. Seybolt.

Atomic Physics Lecture Slated Tonight at 8

Sigma Xi to Honor Princeton Professor

The University community will be initiated in the scientific main-springs of the atomic age, this evening at 8 o'clock, when Dr. Henry Smyth, professor of physics and chairman of the department at Princeton university, lectures on "Fifty Years of Atomic Physics" in 207 Chapman hall, under auspices of Sigma Xi, national science honorary, and University lectures committee.

Dr. Smyth, a member of Sigma Xi, will be honored by the University chapter at a banquet set for 5:30 p.m. in the Faculty club. A Sigma Xi business meeting will precede the lecture, at 7:30 p.m. in 204 Chapman hall.

Bomb Consultant

After two years as consultant to the atomic bomb project, in 1945, "Atomic Energy for Military Purposes" was written by Dr. Smyth and issued by the war department for two purposes: to reduce the anticipated flood of pseudo-scientific explanations of an infernal machine that harnesses the basic power of the universe and to allay fears of millions over a "force from which the sun draws its powers."

The Smyth report was written for the scientist and not for the layman. Its author explained at the time of its release: "The average citizen cannot be expected to understand clearly how an atom bomb is constructed or how it works, but there is in this country a substantial group of engineers who can understand such things and who can explain the potentialities of atom bombs to their fellow-citizens. The present is written for this professional group."

Ph.D. at Cambridge

Dr. Smyth received from Princeton a BA in 1918, an MA degree in 1920 and a Ph.D. in 1921. A Ph.D. was received at Cambridge university, England, in 1923. He was National Research fellow at Cambridge from 1921 to 1923, at Princeton from 1923 to 1924, and a fellow of the Guggenheim Memorial foundation from 1931 to 1932.

Dr. Smyth authored "Matter, Motion, and Electricity" in 1939, and was named consultant on war research projects to the National Research council and to the Office of Scientific Research and Development in 1940.
