

DUCK TRACKS

By WALLY HUNTER
Assistant Sports Editor

Below is a portion of a column written by sportswriter Marlowe Branagan of the Portland Journal, on the subject of Oregon's ex line coach, Vaughn Corley. The sentiments that are expressed here are typical of what many people acquainted with the athletic set-up at Eugene have said in the past.

VAUGHN CORLEY

Corley is no longer a part of the Duck athletic set-up, having accepted a coaching position at University of Arizona, but it might be well to quote Branagan because Vaughn made many friends here even though most will agree that he was no world-beater. Said Branagan, "The last orchid in the Tex Oliver floral piece which graced the University of Oregon football table has departed and, for one, we're downright sorry to see Vaughn Corley hike off to Arizona . . ."

"If one were stick to the fact Vaughn Corley being line coach at the U. of O., chances are his departure would be hailed with glee by a lot of Webfoot grid fans, as there was just an element of truth in the statement last fall (that) the Webfoots didn't have a line . . . At least not much of a line."

"He Never Did Get a Chance"

"In fairness to Vaughn Corley, he never did get a chance to follow the dictates of his own conscience. When a guy signed as assistant to Oliver it seems all he was supposed to do was show up for a picture with which to grace programs, yearbooks and various and sundry school magazines, fade into the background and there remain until time for another film."

"It isn't entirely known just how much—or how little—an Oliver assistant was supposed to do in his daily trip to a practice field. Suffice to say, they didn't generally get a chance to do much under their own power."

Up at University of Portland the sports moguls are setting the Pilots up with a better than average football schedule. In spite of a dreary season last year the Portland club has a nine-game schedule that includes some pretty fair competition. Included on the docket are St. Mary's, Oregon State, and Washington State.

Johns Has Ineligibility Trouble

On top of having to fight their way down the home stretch for the southern division title UCLA is also having player trouble. Coach Ned Johns lost Center Marvin Lee and Guard Ronnie Pearson via the scholastic ineligibility axe. Johns is switching Dave Minor, who substitutes for Don Barksdale, to center to take up the slack at the pivot post. He is supposed to have plenty of forwards to take up where Pearson left off. Loss of only two substitute ball players might not be so tough in an ordinary year, but when the team is pounding its way into the home stretch it could be disastrous.

Williamson Chosen by Friel

When the University of Idaho picked their all-opponent all-star basketball team the Oregon Webfoots failed to have a ball player listed on the mythical outfit. However Washington State Coach Jack Friel did a little better for the Ducks. On Friel's outfit he named Cliff Crandall and Red Rocha (normally a center) of Oregon State at forwards, Jack Nichols of Washington at center, Lew Beck of Oregon State and either Stan Williamson of Oregon or Bobby Jorgenson of Washington at guards.

Blanchard Ruled Out of IC-4A Meet

Back at the West Point Military academy things don't seem to be going too well for the Army's all-American football player Doc Blanchard. Blanchard has been chalked off the entry list of the Saturday night IC-4A meet in Madison Square garden, because he skipped a class at the Academy. In 1945 burly Doc won the shotput championship in this meet. This same thing happened when Blanchard wasn't allowed to enter the national A.A.U. track and field meet a week ago.

Beauty Parades for Sports Staff, Choice Not Revealed

The Emerald sports shack played host to its Cover Girl candidates last night with three anonymous judges observing the performance with great care. On hand to blink shyly at flashing camera bulbs were representatives from five athletic teams.

The brilliance of the display caused the senile trio no end of concern. Blood pressure rose, and jaws sagged. A decision was impossible. They retired to the Side, then to Taylor's. Finally in desperation they invaded the Igloo only to find Beavers cracking jokes about nice Oregon girls.

The judges had a bitter night! They guarantee a decision sometime today.

Present at the sports shack extravaganza were:

Gloria Albertson, Hendricks hall, track.

Wanda Shaw, Pi Phi, skiing.
Joany Larue, Theta, basketball.
Joanne Utz, Delta Zeta, golf.
Nancy Fitzhugh, Chi O, football.

Unable to attend the "get acquainted" session was Harriet Vannatta, Kappa, representing the swimming team.

Though only one of the entries is slated to represent the sports page in the Emerald Cover Girl finals, all sportsided candidates will be included in a welcome committee to help usher in the state high school basketball tourney at McArthur court March 11-15.

The coeds will cooperate in hospitality deluxe to the teams and followers of the 16 schools entered in the high school tournament.

Spring Graduates Offered Positions

Graduating students are literally passing up good opportunities when they fail to file their credentials and letters of recommendation with the student placement bureau, according to Dean Karl W. Onthank of the University personnel administration. He pointed out that interviews between prospective employers and graduating students are arranged largely on the basis of these credentials.

A representative of the B. F. Goodrich Rubber company will conduct interviews Friday with job-seeking students.

The Aetna Life Insurance company representative is scheduled to be at the University placement bureau Tuesday.

Two men are wanted to fill positions in the National Carbon company sales department.

Full details on jobs now available to graduating students, can be obtained at the placement office, room 6, Friendly.

Zazula Arrives

Newly appointed backfield coach Frank Zazula arrived on the University campus yesterday to assume his duties under grid mentor Jim Aiken.

Zazula was former coach at Akron, Ohio, before he was selected for the Oregon job. He played high school football under Aiken, and was a teammate of Dick Miller, recently named line coach by Aiken.
