

DUCK TRACKS

By BERNIE HAMMERBECK
Sports Editor

The stuttering 1947 Oregon Ducks close their not-so-good season tonight in their fourth try at the Oregon State beavers. It is the end of the 1947 basketball civil war, but it is more than that. Can the Beavers sweep the four-game series?

An eight-and-eight record, third place, ending the season with a win, and a variety of other aspects are shoved far into the background, when the Beavers from up the valley step on the court tonight. Not since the 1933 OSC coast champs have the Orangemen been able to sweep the series. And never have they been able to pull the trick against Coach Hobby Hobson.

BILL ANDERSON

Slats Gill's boys will be gunning. They're on top. The Webfoots are down. They have little love for their "southern branch." And they will be seeking to re-establish a record that was somewhat smeared last weekend when they staggered through the Inland Empire winning two and losing an equal number.

Webfoots Want to Win

The Webfoots, however, have even more incentive for winning. They have been a hot-and-cold machine all year. They were early tabbed high, but slid to the bottom in short order. The Ducks have one good OSC game to their credit—the first of the year when they fell 74-69 in an overtime. Theirs is the opportunity tonight to preserve a record now 14 years old—four straight to the Beavers—never!

Four Ducks will be playing their last college game—Bob Wren, Roy Seeborg, Ken Hays, and George Bray. All but Wren were on hand last year to knock the Staters out of the championship in the final contest. Bray was on the team in 1944 that administered four straight lickings to the Bevomen. Theirs is another big job tonight.

Bill Anderson Back in the States

Big Bill Anderson, the blond Swede from Scappoose, and 1945 regular on the Oregon grid team, is currently back in the state, but still in the navy. Bill is stationed in San Diego and home on leave. One of the state of Oregon's outstanding prep prospects, he spent but one term at Oregon before answering the beckoning finger of Uncle Sam's navy.

While a prepper, Anderson was named to the All-American high school track team as the No. 1 discus man. He carried away the major portion of the state meet hardware in the weight events winning the discus two years and dropping the shot put event by less than an inch.

The big Swede expects to remain in the navy until early 1948, which means he should be back for track next year. At present he is burning up San Diego maples as a basketball star with several high school all-staters riding the bench on the same team. Though not working out strenuously he has hurled the discus out around the 135-foot mark in a few practice heaves.

On the Left... Sportside Winner

Pride of the track team Gloria Albertson (left above) received the nod of approval of the Emerald sports experts last night, and will represent the sports staff in the Emerald Cover Girl contest. She will be among the contestants introduced prior to the Oregon-Oregon State game at McArthur court tonight.

freshman, Hendricks hall, track; Nancy Fitzhugh, sophomore, Chi O, football; Joanne Utz, sophomore, Delta Zeta, golf; Joany Larue, freshman, Theta, basketball; and Wanda Shaw, senior Pi Phi, skiing. Other coeds sponsored by campus athletic teams were Harriet Vannatta, freshman, Kappa, swimming; and Jane Daggett, freshman, Pi Phi, baseball.

All seven coeds will represent the Emerald sports page in welcoming in the state high school basketball at McArthur court March 11-15.

ND Swimmers Vie in Seattle

University of Oregon's varsity swimming team is doped to fight it out with Washington State College for second place in the northern division swimming meet in Seattle today. The unbeaten University of Washington Huskies are top-heavy favorites to run away with the laurels.

Coach John Warren's swimmers, beaten only by Washington this season, are expected to have a battle on their hands with the WSC Cougars. The Webfoot swim team emerged victorious over WSC in a thrilling meet here on the campus once, but gained their victory margin through a violation of rules by a member of the Cougar squad.

The five foot-long members of the Pacific Coast conference northern division, plus Montana will meet at the University of Washington pool. Montana will enter a five-man team, Oregon State College eight, Washington State 14, Washington 18 and the Webfoots 10.

The Webfoot squad is composed of Ralph Huestis, breaststroke; Earl Walters and Johnny Miller, backstroke; Tom Corbett and Benny Holcomb, diving; George Moorhead, Alden Sundlie, Paul Thompson, Bob Hiatt, and Don Rush, freestylers.

Corbett will be making an attempt to remain the diving crown which he won in 1942. Oregon State's Ray Staub is the only plunger that has given Corbett any trouble in hence thus far this season.

Another favorite on the Duck squad is Bob Hiatt, who is expected to take honors in the 220 freestyle. Cougar paddler Byron Canning will be Hiatt's top opponent.
