Amphibs to Kickoff 'Weekend' Festival

Prelude to Junior Weekend festivities this year will be the annual water pageant presented by the members of Amphibians, women's swimming honorary. A fantasy theme, "Evening in Paris," under the direction of Betsy Moffit, vice-president of the organization, will form the background for the swimming numbers.

Formerly, the group gave two performances of its pageant, one for students on the Thursday night before Junior Weekend and one for the parents on Friday afternoon. This year only the Thursday night performance will be given and the group is attempting to secure the use of the men's pool for the affair in order to accommodate more people.

Oregon Erudites Have Queries, No Answer To Atomic Riddle

By AL ENGLISH

The blind are leading the blind these days at Oregon. Three of the University's list of high school commencement speakers, drawn from the faculty, admit their own atomic-age confusion in the topic they have selected for their addresses.

The May 1 number of the Oregon state system of higher education leaflet series will reveal that our pedagogic thinkers, borne down with the weight of post-war problems, are asking "Where Do We Go from Here?" The departments of architecture, personnel administration, and physical education all show this bafflement.

Meanwhile, over at Eastern Oregon college in La Grande there is less self-searching introspection in the registrar's query "Where Do You Go From Here?"

At Corvallis the worried savants seem to be hearing already the ominous rumble of The Bomb's explosion. Oregon State's dean of

'Weekend' Beauty Finalists Chosen

Six Blondes, Two Brunettes Are Tapped To Enter Final Contest for Queenship

Gentlemen—and ladies too—still seem to prefer blondes, for that old adage was upheld yesterday when six of the eight Junior Weekend finalists for queen and court ranged from honey-colored to dark blondes.

Chosen from two dozen women who were entered by their living organizations, the eight juniors include: Jean Barringer, interior design; Pat Davis, interior design; Nina Sue Fernimen, psychology; Norma Figone, business administration; Bobbie Fullmer, anthropology; Janis Petersen, art; Sallie Timmens, journalism, and Joanne Utz, advertising.

For Jean Barringer, who hails from Washington high in Portland, the honor is still a thrill, but not a new experience, for Miss Barringer was a Rose Festival princess when in high school. The tall, sophisticated Pi Beta Phi is a blue-eyed blonde—and house manager of her sorority.

Tigard's Pat Davis can also boast another royal position, for she ruled as junior prom queen and as DeMolay Sweetheart Princess for the Portland chapters during her high school days. One of the two brunettes named, this Chi Omega is nearly five feet seven inches, and has brown eyes.

Klamath Falls will be proud of Nina Sue Fernimen, for the five foot four inch blonde hails from that country. Sue, president of Highland house, is interested in flying and dramatics, in addition to her psychology major.

A brown-eyed blonde is Norma Figone, a candidate who attended Commerce high in Portland, her home city. Working part-time in the comptroller's office, Norma still found time to participate in colleg and Alpha Gamma Delta activities, and was a Kwama when a sophomore.

Contest Offers Cash Prizes For Libraries

Plans are now being made for the Library Day contest, to be held May 10. An annual contest, it is sponsored by the Association of Patrons and Friends of the University library to develop an enthusiasm and interest in books and reading.

Any University student may enter his personal library. The objective is to show a collection of books which have a particular meaning for their owner, rather than to emphasize numbers or money value.

The general rules for the contest state that entries must be limited to less than 50 volumes, and each book must bear a definite mark of ownership.

Entries must be made by 6 p. m. May 9, at the circulation desk and must be arranged in the space allotted by 10 a. m., May 10. They will remain on display until 6 p. m., May 11. Prize winners of former years are invited to exhibit, but they are ineligible for another prize award.

Two Contests

There are two contest sections this year. The first part is for the students' general cultural library. Required textbooks may not be included in this exhibit. The judging of this section will be by a committee of five, appointed.
