Injury-Plagued Cindermen Leave for Seattle Today

By AL PIETSCHMAN

A crippled Oregon track team shoves off this morning for Seattle and the Saturday meet with University of Washington. Colonel Bill Hayward had no optimism about his team yesterday, and although not making the trip himself, he figures that injuries will swing the meet in favor of the Huskies. In Hayward's absence, John Warren takes over and will coach the men on the Washington oval.

Both Hayward and Warren recognize the Huskies, under coach Hec Edmundson, as one of the powers in track on the coast this year. Oregon was figured to come within twenty points or so at the beginning of the week, but now with the cripples staying at home, Washington will probably swamp the Duck.

Robinson Out

One more man was added to the injury list yesterday by Hayward in the final workout before boarding train. Strong-armed Lou Robinson is staying home with an injured arm.

Robinson was counted on for a sure first in the javelin as his better than two hundred feet heavies are by far the best in the division. Here the Ducks lose five points unless Jim Porter delivers the goods with one of his 185-feet heaves.

Other trackmen not making the trip that were expected to bring in points are Jake Leicht and Carl ing to Hayward, includes Bill Maxey. Jake is still hampered by a Beifuss, Brown, Jack Doyle, Chuck pulled leg muscle, and Maxey Elliot, Ray Heindeinrich, Henhasn't recovered compeltely from thorne, Jerry Hunter, John his spill in the OSC relays.

Still, Henthorne in Dashes

With Henthorne and Wally Still in the sprints Oregon is just at mussen, Still, Hal White and Wyn half its strength. If Maxey and Wright. Leicht were ready for competition the Ducks would have had a good chance to sweep the speed races.

Henthorne will give any of Edmundson's men a tough run in any of the races he enters, and on the basis of his time at Medford Wednesday-a :9.8 century on a short track-Dave should be high point man for the Webfeots.

Only injured man to round into shape this week and making the trip is Merce Brown, high jumper and broad jumper. Merce sprained his ankle in the Idaho dual meet and has been nursing it since then. tablished in 1892. Sports Staff This Issue:

While the workout showed several men with promise, it also revealed the present lack of talent.

To prove that the openings were being made by the offensive line Backfield Coach Frank Zazula took over the bal-carrying in the right half spot. He proceeded to cut and twist through the defense and left no doubt that the line was operating satisfactorily, and the trouble was with the backfield man.

Dunahoo Returns To Aid Webfoots

With the return of blond Jimmy Dunahood, the undefeated Webfoot golf team is at full strength for its weekend matches with Idaho and Washington State.

Sid Milligan's red-hot golfers are heavy favorites to trip the Vandals and Cougars on the basis of their victories over Oregon State, Portland university, and the northern division defending champs, the Washington Huskies.

Lou Stafford and Glen Spivey held fast to their number 1 and 2 spots during the week's challenge matches. Stafford, who suffered his only defeat show-shooting Tom Marlow of Portland last Saturday, is expected to regain his usual parbusting form.

Dom Provost hit a sizzling 71 to edge out Bob Sederstrom for the third slot on the team. Sederstrom takes over as number four, followed by Rod Taylor and Jim Dunahoo.

Johnny Ekstrom and George Kikes are still battling for the seventh spot and threaten to crack the varsity six match line-

Duck, Beaver JV Nines loday in Corvailis

This afternoon in Corvallis, the the third game in its series with Oregon JV baseball team will play the Oregon State junior varsity, its only opponent thus far this season.

In the first meeting between the two teams, the heavy Beaver bats poked out a 16-11 victory after the Ducks had tied the scare at 10-all in the fifth inning with a nine run splurge.

Last Friday the JVs gained a decided revenge by pounding three Oregon State pitchers to win 20-1.

Top Form Near

Koch believes that today's game hustle in this week's practice. and the doubleheader tomorrow with Vanport in Portland should help bring his squad of 20 mep to its peak form by the middle of next week.

With this week's practice, Koch has nearly eliminated his problem child, the infield. Although there are still two candidates for each position-except second base, the players after working together as a unit are getting that feel necessary for a good working combination. In the second game with the Beavers, two jayvee infield combinations committed but three
