

New Russian Professor Due

Alexander Koiransky, new assistant professor of Russian, will arrive on the campus this evening. His classes will begin Tuesday, September 30, in the rooms indicated with the exception of the first year Russian class which will be held in 114 P. E. A native of Russia, Koiransky left that country during the first revolution. During the war he taught Russian as part of the navy language program at Stanford university. More recently he taught at Baylor university in Texas. Koiransky will teach Russian, Russian literature in English, and French.
