

Oregon Grad Edits at Harvard Rex Gunn Wins Speech Contest Receives National Recognition

Jim Frost, graduate of the school of journalism in 1942, has been named editor of the 1948 Harvard yearbook, according to Kenneth W. Christianson, who spent the weekend in Eugene.

A student in the school of business at Harvard, Frost was business manager of the Emerald in his senior year at Oregon.

Christianson, who graduated from the school of journalism in 1946, has just completed work for his master's degree at the Harvard school of business. He was awarded one of the T. Neil Taylor prizes in his senior year at the University.

He served on the executive board of the student association in the Harvard school of business administration. Christianson has accepted a position with Otis Elevator company at San Francisco. He leaves soon for New York for six months training with the company and then expects to return to the coast.

Rex Gunn, junior in business administration, has been awarded $20 as second prize winner in the 1946-47 Intercollegiate Peace Speech association contest.

His work, "An Oration on Peace," was submitted to the national association in manuscript form after he won first place in the Oregon contest last February. Howard C. Morgan, executive secretary of the association has written: "Your central idea is well expressed and given adequate support from every angle," he continued.

Member of Class of '19 Visitor to UO Campus; Progress Particularly Impresses Career Diplomat

A visitor on the campus Friday was John N. Hamlin, class of '19, now a member of the U. S. foreign service. He is visiting friends in Eugene and Portland, and will shortly return to Washington, D. C., from where he will travel to Buenos Aires to assume his new post as first secretary of the American embassy there.

Hamlin said that he had visited the campus several times since leaving for officers' training school in March, 1918, noting progress at the University each time. He was "particularly impressed at the progress found here at this visit." He remarked on the progress in "practically every aspect."

Hamlin was an Alpha Tau Omega at Oregon, and called on the house for lunch yesterday. He also saw many other friends at the University.

Following the first world war, Hamlin attended Harvard for five years, continuing his preparation for the foreign service. He spent ten years as secretary of diplomatic missions in Tirana, Albania, in Madrid, and in Buenos Aires, where his new post will be.

He then put in two years in Washington in the department of state, European section, following which he was American consul at Naples, Italy, for three years, and consul at Seville for eight years.

The veteran diplomat explained that men interested in the foreign service may write to the department of state for a pamphlet containing information on the service. He stated that formal application must be made for designation to take the examination, which consists of two parts, one written, one oral.

ATO, DTD

Sandford started pitching the pigskin around. Bill Coleman was the target and the end zone was the location. It was a bulls-eye for Sandford for the opening TD. In the fourth quarter Sandford steamed one to Bob Kehrl from the 9-yard line making it a decisive Delt victory.

SAE 13, French 0

Jim Popp monopolized the scoring column as he led his teammates, the Sigma Alpha Epsilon crew, to a 13-0 triumph over French hall. Both scores were racked in the fourth quarter. Bud Helm intercepted a French hall pass and galloped to the five-yard stripe. Ray Hertzog passed to Popp on the next play and SAE was in pay dirt. Hertzog flipped another from the 50-yard line which Popp received for the final tally.

Tekes 1, Campbell 0

Battling viciously for precious first downs in the final minutes of play, but unable to move ahead, the Campbell club fell victim to Tau Kappa Epsilon 1-0, after TKE out "first downed" them 5-4. Mel Krause fired pass after pass for the Campbell men, but the victors kept far enough ahead to drive home the win.
