MIAMI, Fla., Oct. 11. A new tropical storm of close to hurricane force neared western Cuba tonight on a direct course for south Florida where weary Red Cross workers were still evacuating refugees from floods in the wake of the great September storm.

The weather bureau located the new storm in the Caribbean 240 miles southwest of Havana and predicted it would reach Florida tomorrow.

Today's robbery, following the first two in the same neat pattern, brought rural bank losses within the past six months to exactly $100,000.

DAYTON, O., Oct. 10. Orville Wright, 76, co-inventor of the airplane and the first man to successfully fly in a heavier-than-air craft, collapsed here today but his personal physician announced some hours later that his condition was "much improved."

Bearded Sophs Rally For Fete

Shaving mugs and razors will be laid away Monday by men of sophomore standing as preparations for the coming Sophomore Whiskerino begin to materialize.

For the benefit of those sophomores who may have trouble producing the necessary bristles, the committee decided to set the starting date two weeks before the Whiskerino, a week earlier than in the past years. The results of the two-week razor famine will be judged at the all campus dance on October 25 by Chuck Elliot, campus barber.

Posse Furnished

First of 47-49 Concert Series to Feature One of Great Comedians in Grand Opera

By JUNE FITZGIBBONS

Salvatore Baccaloni, accompanied by Warner Bass at the piano, will present the first of the '47-'48 concert series tonight at McArthur court at 8:15.

This brilliant singer, who is noted for having the outstanding qualities of both a tenor and a bass, has also formed a reputation of being among the greatest comedians in opera.

Toscanini Engages

After hearing Baccaloni in 1926, Arturo Toscanini engaged him for La Scala opera in Milan, one of the principal opera houses of Europe. From that time this basso buffo has played 160 roles in five languages.

Baccaloni is content playing the ridiculous parts and doing what he wants to do—that is to give to the public of the world the enjoyment and solace found in music. Thinking in terms of the future, he wishes to combine the knowledge of the theater and his training he had in architecture to glorify the stage presentations of operas. He received a degree in architecture and worked in that field until his singing graduated from a hobby into a profession.

The Eugene Oregon civic music association, which is responsible for bringing the annual concert series, is regarded as a national example of the teamwork of "town and gown." G. E. Gaylord, director of the civic group, stated recently that we have the largest organized audience in the world.

Students are admitted by showing their student body cards. The doors open at 7:30 and Salvatore Baccaloni starts his program at 8:15.

Religious Group Chooses Three

Bjorg Hansen, Helen Sherman, and Art Johnson were elected to hold the three vacant student positions on the University Religious council at their meeting Thursday at the YMCA.

These students were selected for interest and experience in student religious affairs on the campus. Their election now brings the student membership, elected from the campus at large, back up to the maximum of ten.

Plans for activities of the council for this year were discussed. An appeal was made to the religious organizations on the campus not to plan any function for Sunday evening, October 26, that would conflict with the assembly to be held that night which will formally start "Religious Evaluation Week."

This is the first event of the year where all of the religious groups will meet together in one meeting. Complete cooperation was requested by the council to make it a success.

Schleicher Plans Kiwanis Address

BULLETIN

Coaches for both teams reported late last night that members of their squads would be denied late permission tonight to insure them plenty of rest for tomorrow's supreme test.

Beta Phi clash with their challengers, Kappa Kappa Gamma's new pledges. The contest will be staged on the University high school scrimmage field.

The Pi Phi grid experts will be favoured in the contest because of their superiority in numbers, but the coaches have warned their feminine charges that the Kappas will field a potent team.

Brain trust of the Kappa squad is Ken Morin, who was imported from Coos Bay by Harriet Vannatta. Coaching the arrow aggregation are Hal Schick, Tom Roberts, and Jim Boyd, from the white barn across the street.

There will also be officials. Again the Phi Deltis have worked into the racket. Don McCollom has been signed to referee the contest. He denies any direct affiliation with Pi Beta Phi. Max

Maude has swindled a contract to umpire.

Starters All

Starting as ends for the Pi Phi will be Joan Simons and Peggy Utz, beautiful downfield blockers. A pair of 250-pounders, Cora Kneeland and Jean Steiner, have been selected to anchor the tackle spots, and the starting guards will probably be Ann Case and Margery Hammond. Holding down the pivot position will be Ann Seabrook.

The backfield packs plenty of punch with Jackie Newburn running the show from her quarterback position. Joan Carr is at
