

Students to Get Aid in Speech

A speech defect clinic will be held each Monday from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. in 267 Emerald hall, it was announced yesterday by Dr. Kenneth Scotted Wood, associate professor of speech and director of the speech correction and hearing clinic on the campus.

"Any student who stutters or has other nervous speech difficulties is welcome to attend the clinic for help in the program which continues for the entire school year," said Dr. Wood. The clinic director added, "we do not promise to cure anyone, although we have had great success in permanently helping the stutterer reduce the number of situations in which his speech fluency breaks down."

Dr. Wood and his advanced speech pathology students have been engaged in several research studies concerning the nature and treatment of stuttering. He stressed that the first step in overcoming a speech handicap is for the stutterer to seek help himself.

Although the study of stuttering is still in the experimental stages, much is known that can aid the stutterer. Not all stutters can be helped by the same method, Dr. Wood pointed out, as each case presents a different problem.

Male University of Southern California students armed themselves with long scissors as a token of protest of the new long hem line.

Ticket Sell-out Expected Soon For "Man Who Came to Dinner"

Versatile Bob Over will take time out from his part as "Banjo" in "The Man Who Came to Dinner," forthcoming production of the University Guild theater, to act as box office business manager for the second consecutive year. As a combination actor-box office manager last year, Over appeared in "I Remember Mama" and "Green Pastures." He also succeeded in organizing an efficiently handled ticket sale for all six plays.

Aside from assigning people for the box office in Johnson hall, he is also responsible for incoming money and a report on the sales. If there aren't enough tickets to satisfy the demand, additional performances are given.

"We expect a sell-out for 'The Man' judging from the interest already shown by students and townspeople," Over predicted.

This year the box office staff consists of Jane Cardiner, Paula Castle, Shirley Bruck, Beverly Buckley, Shirley Peters, Pat Laxton, Marie Newman, and Rockie Cogan.

For the opening play, which will be October 24, 25, 29, 30, 31, and November 1, the box office in Johnson hall will open Monday, October 20 for season ticket holders only. Regular ticket sale will begin Tuesday, October 21, from 10 a.m. to 12 m., and from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.

17,262 Enrolled In State System

Enrollment in Oregon institutions of higher education reached a new high this fall with 17,262 students registered, the chancellor's office announced Saturday.

The new mark represents a four and one-half per cent increase over last year's 16,520 enrollees.

Veteran enrollment dropped to 9,077 from last fall's 10,242 ex-G.I. students. This year's total excludes the University dental school for which figures are not available.

The University's latest registration total stands at 5,883, a four per cent boost from last year.

All of the Oregon institutions show increases in enrollment, except the University of Oregon medical school in which enrollment is limited.

Largest increase was posted by the Oregon College of Education, with enrollment up 36 per cent. Vanport extension center showed the smallest increase with enrollment up two per cent.

Report Presented By Dorm Director

Reasons for increased living costs at the University were explained to the congressional joint committee on the economic report yesterday when Mrs. Genevieve Turnipseed, director of dormitories, appeared before the committee at Portland. Numerous representatives of schools and food buyers were also scheduled to appear.

Mrs. Turnipseed presented a study of increased costs on the campus, including the rising cost of food and the resulting rise in board and labor expense. Twenty-five copies of her report have been requested by those in charge of the hearings.
