Freshman Enrollment

"The over-all freshman enrollment this year is 25 per cent below last year," Constance revealed, "and this is pretty much the general national picture."

which have been unobtainable for the past five years. At least Decca, Columbia, and Victor can do this although Capitol, Majestic and the indies will find this difficult because of their limited catalogs. MGM will have no trouble for they can snip the sound track of any MGM picture.

As for classical recordings, importations will become more and more popular. Keynote, Vox and English Decca have already started peddling foreign-made pressings and in most cases, the recordings are technically far superior to any domestic records yet produced.

So, no matter how much Hallock argues for the disc ban, he and Petrillo will find that the record industry can't be squelched. And who knows, a temporary ban on band recording might lead to better recordings once they begin recording again.

rollment at the University will be the large numbers of veterans graduating this year, with few ex-GIs coming in to replace them, the associate registrar asserted.

A report drawn up by Constance on probable future enrollment at the University pointed out a possible method of offsetting diminishing student members at the University would be to lower admission (GPA) requirements for out-of-state students.

The proportion of out-of-state students to resident students now stands at an all-time low of 12 per cent, the report revealed.

"Within the last decade this proportion has run as high as 23 per cent," the report showed.

Restrictions Needed

The difference, Constance asserted, is probably due to restrictions on out-of-state student enrollment at the University, made necessary entirely by an existing shortage of space and personnel.

Lowering the out-of-state entrance qualifications, the report of the associate registrar stressed, would not involve letting down general entrance standards at the University.
