

Officials Attend 'Cost' Hearing

Four faculty members and the director of dormitories represented the University of Oregon October 20 and 21 at a congressional hearing in Portland investigating the increased cost of living.

The Western subcommittee of the United States senate held meetings for two days in the city hall council chambers, while representatives of commercial and consumers groups explained how present price levels affected them.

Mrs. Genevive Turnipseed, director of dormitories, presented a picture of the current dormitory budget as compared with the pattern of the past eight years.

Dr. Victor P. Morris and Dr. Wesley C. Ballaine of the Eacholer of Arts school, and Dr. Paul W. Ellis and Dr. Calvin Crumbaker of the economics department were the faculty delegates.

Together with Dr. M. N. Nelson, economics head at Oregon State, and a representative of Reed college they have been asked by the senate committee to evaluate the data accumulated at the hearing. It will be their task to analyze the material and to prepare conclusions and recommendations.

WSSF Plans to Help Student Plight Abroad

Throwing a pass of $1000 in the general direction of the Burma area, specifically the University of Rangoon, will be one of the goals of this year's World Student Service Fund drive, according to Chairman Mart Pond.

"Selecting the Burma school to be recipients of Oregon aid along with several scholarships will stipulate the destination of the funds raised here and consequently should put the urgency of the drive in the students' minds," he said.

There will be no competition on the campus for this fund which collects only from students. Pond emphasizes that it is hoped that all students interested in the goal of the drive and who can afford to do so will contribute at least one dollar.

Green buttons will be presented everyone who contributes a dollar. Members of the committee are: Jordis Benke, campus contact chairman; Marguerite Johns and Oliver Larson, fund treasurers; Bill Monroe, promotion; Helen Sherman, publicity; Dick Randall, stunts; Bev Pitman, posters; Tom Hazzard, religious organizations; and Sally Waller, off-campus drive.

Members of Phi Theta Upsilon and Druids, junior service honoraries, will be luncheon speakers at campus living organizations during the week. Button sales booths in the Co-op and library will be managed by members of Kwama, sophomore women's service honorary.

Study Clinic To Hear Student Problems

Study problems facing individual students will be discussed, and specific advice given at a "study clinic" meeting tonight from 4 to 5 p. m. in the assistant dean of men's conference room, second floor of Emerald hall.

Any student getting low grades in any course may attend the clinic, according to the dean's office.

The clinic is scheduled to meet regularly from 4 to 5 p. m. every Tuesday and Thursday. Students may come and leave at any time during the meeting.
