

Registrar Office To Inaugurate New System

A new system of grade-reporting will begin operating at the conclusion of this term, according to Curtis E. Avery, University registrar.

Under the new plan, students will receive accumulative, term by term reports on large, detailed forms, instead of the old name-course-grade cards.

The new form which will be reproduced on an Ozalid blueprint machine will be a reproduction of the registration record which is kept in the registrar's file. This record will include the following information:

The student's name, code number, class and major, vocational objective, former high school, birth date, veteran status, church preference, home address, parents' name and addresses, University address, term hours, credits, GPA and decile, all corrected to the term covered in the report.

The actual grade report section of the form will list the department and course number, the credits and grades received. A special feature will be the added list of classes for which the student has registered in advance.

Students Mature

These new, comprehensive grade reports will be distributed as soon as enrollment processes for the following term have been completed by the student and the actual grade cards have been received from the faculty, Avery stated.

No grade report forms will be mailed to the students, but will be available at designated points on the campus, according to a schedule to be announced by the registrar's office.

Following the procedure established last year, no grade reports will be mailed to students' home addresses, except on special request. Registrar Avery declared that this would save considerable time in issuing reports, and would be in keeping with the University's assumption of the individual student's maturity.

The actual speed with which grade report forms can be made out and distributed will depend largely upon the early reporting of grades from the faculty to the registrar, Avery stated. These cards, which come in by departments, must be rearranged according to names and then sorted before being transcribed onto report forms.

Conroy Reports On Conference

Scabbard and Blade will make an effort through the War department to secure commissions for those in R.O.T.C. as soon as they finish their military training, reported Joe Conroy, delegate to the national convention of the military honorary.

At present those training must receive their bachelor's degree before they receive a commission, Conroy explained.

Conroy, a junior in business administration, was delegate from the University of Oregon to the twenty-third convention of the National Society of Scabbard and blade, held in Cincinnati, Ohio, November 12-15.

Coed Attire Announced

Proper attire for the Oregon-Oregon State game to be played at Hayward field this afternoon will be campus clothes for all University women. The announcement was made by Nila Dessinger, AWS social chairman.
