Senator Wayne Morse To Speak Here Tonight

Controversial Politician Revisits Former School

Wayne L. Morse, Republican senator from Oregon, who served for 12 years as dean of the University law school and head of the state system of higher education law studies.

Wayne L. Morse, Republican senator from Oregon and former dean of Oregon law school, will speak on "Political Issues as I See Them" tonight at 7:30 p.m. in McArthur court. The talk, which will be free to the public, is sponsored by the assembly committee.

Morse, one of the most controversial figures on the American political scene today, has been described as a prodigy among educators and labor mediators. When he became dean of the Oregon law school in 1932 he was the youngest dean of a major law school in the country. Morse held this position until he retired to run for the United States senate in 1944.

Active in State

Although Morse had never run for public office before he had been active in both state and national public affairs. He served on several Oregon crime and penal institution committees and in 1938 was appointed Pacific coast arbitrator for the United States department of labor. Although a Republican he was appointed to this post by a Democratic administration following requests of both labor and management.

In 1942 he was appointed by President Roosevelt as a public member of the War Labor Relations board for which he prepared many opinions including the famous Montgomery Ward case.

Described as a "secret New Dealer," "a labor stooge," and "the best Republican in the Democratic party," Morse has never been accused of grinding the ax of partisanship. Throughout his political career, which at times seemed to shift from one camp to another, he has characteristically tried to decide every issue on the basis of the issue itself rather than taking an "over-all" or long-term policy view.

Morse has also strongly attacked Senator Taft of Ohio for leading the group that destroyed liberalism in the Republican party. He voted for the UN charter and thinks that the United States, along with other member nations, must yield a degree of sovereignty if the organization is to be successful.

Rain: University Students Battle Near-Record Flood

By STAN TURNBULL

Flood waters were threatening western Oregon with one of its worst inundations in recent years Tuesday night, while basements and many streets in Eugene were also flooding. Families, including those of University students, were evacuating the low area between Eugene and Springfield, as a crest of 15 feet, three feet over flood stage, was predicted for the Willamette river between 10 p.m. and midnight.

Forty families living in trailers near the railroad bridge at Springfield, including 12 University families, were moved with their trailers to University street near McArthur court. Other trailers in this area were being towed to trailer parks in Eugene and Springfield and to the Lane county fairgrounds. Permanent residents were evacuating to the homes of friends,

DuShane Helps Better Greeks At Lawrence

Donald M. DuShane of Lawrence college, who has been appointed director of student personnel, has shown himself outstanding in the field of college-fraternity relations.

Through his work Lawrence college has become known for its outstanding fraternity program and the contribution of this program to high educational standards. The Lawrence program for fraternities has been discussed at length in the national publication, "Banta's Greek Exchange," and also in an article, "The Where and Why of High Fraternity Achievement" by Clyde S. Johnson, assistant dean of undergraduates at UCLA.

The former publication stated in the April 1941 issue: "The spirit of college and fraternity cooperation may languish in some quarters, but at Lawrence college it flourishes in full bloom."

"The latest evidence of the fundamental compatibility of college and fraternity interests is given on the campus of that institution in the form of five beautiful new fraternity houses, conceived, financed, and built on a partnership basis and made possible only by a crystallized and highly laudable mutual-assistance policy."
