Huskies Post Win Over Webfoot Five

Seattle-(UP). The University of Washington Huskies won a hard-fought Pacific Coast Conference basketball game from the University of Oregon here 48-44 before 11,500 fans.

The lead changed hands five times in the first period while the teams ran their totals to 10 apiece.

The Washington five then took the lead and never relinquished it although they were hard pressed all the way.

The Oregon squad, paced by guard Stan Williamson, played a heads-up defensive game on the floor, but the Huskies managed to break through frequently enough to win with superior shooting.

Williamson led the scoring with 16 points, twice as many as his nearest teammate, center Roger Wiley, who scored seven points.

Center Jack Nichols led the scoring for the Huskies with 14 points followed by Bob Jorgensen and Bill Vandenburg with 11 and 12 respectively.

Nation's Cagers Unite . . . . .

Uniform Hoop Play Seen by Mentor

LOS ANGELES, (UP). Eastern and Western basketball styles, once as far apart as the hoops on a court, are approaching standardization.

That's the word today from a gent who should know—Coach Wilbur Johns of UCLA whose Erwin cagers snagged the Southern Division FCC crown last year and recently returned from a successful barnstorming junket to the East.

Travel Contributes

Widespread travel around the country of late is the main reason for the gradual leveling-off of technique and relative strength, as Johns sees it.

The boys—and Coaches—are getting around more, picking up a few ideas from their neighbors and polishing the rough edges.

Moreover, the powers that be are moving to standardize officiating around the nation, which should help considerably.

In the past, even the Northern and Southern divisions of the Pacific Coast conference have operated miles apart in their interpretation of the rules. This hampered UCLA considerably in last year's playoffs with Oregon State up north, and the California Bears noticed the same thing a few weeks back when it hit the trail to Oregon and Washington.

And the Northerners have it just as rough when they move into California.

Currently, the Pacific Coast, the East and the Big Nine all are bending their efforts to bringing the widely varying systems of irregularity. Both East and West creeling into some semblance of coach colleges are giving a try to schooling officials and working them in different sections during the season, besides trying to lure young referees into the whistle-tooting art.

Currently there are three styles of play in the country: (1.) The conservative preconceived pass plays and screen plays which is used mostly in the Big Nine; (2.) The set long-shot with one or two hands, practiced in the West and Southwest; (3.) The two-handed long shot used in the East.

Duck Grid Movies

Movies of the Oregon-Stanford football game played last season will be shown next Tuesday evening in Room 207 Chapman. The first showing will begin at 6:30, with a re-run scheduled at 7:05. There will be no admission charge.

Druids, junior men's honorary, is sponsoring the films. Oregon rooters will have a chance to see a game that most of them missed, since the Stanford game was played at Palo Alto, with the Webfoots winning, 21-6.

Films of last year's Oregon-Oregon State contest will be shown the following Tuesday, February 3.

Webfoot Sparkplug

Little Stan Williamson, the Webfoots floor general, turned in another of his steady games last night against the Washington quintet. Tonight again, the two teams will square off in the Seattle court, in the final game of the season between the two teams.

Cougars Level Idaho

WSC Posts 48-23 Win Over Vandal Hoopmen

PULLMAN, WASH., (UP)—Washington State cagers booted their neighbors from the University of Idaho into the Northern Division cellar in Pacific Coast conference basketball standings thumping the Vandals 48 to 23.

The win enabled the Cougars to get off the doormat themselves and to nip at the heels of Oregon, runner-up to loop-leading Washington and Oregon State.

Five thousand partisan fans whooped it up as the Cougars seized the lead five minutes out and kept pulling steadily away from the bottled-up Vandals. Halftime score was 31-12.

Sharp defensive work by Vince Hanson and Ray Arndt held Idaho's vaunted center, 6-foot-9 Jack Phoenix, to six points, while the Cougars were hitting the hoop with monotonous regularity.

Idaho appeared to stall for most of the second half, slowing the game.

Hanson, WSC's 6-foot-8 center, and forward Ed Gayda paced the Cougars with 12 points each. Phoenix and Jack Rainey were high for the Vandals with six each.

The two teams travel the nine miles to Moscow, to resume their series tomorrow night.

Ray "Tiny" Arndt, 240-pound center for the Washington State Cougars, turned in a rugged game under the backboards against Idaho last night.

All This And Baseball, Too

(UP). Ordinarily music and baseball don't mix, but Eddie Basinski is no ordinary man.

He's the new second baseman for Indianapolis of the American Association—and he's a first violinist with the Buffalo Symphony orchestra.

The slender 24-year-old infielder also has a degree in mechanical engineering from University of Buffalo—which makes him a jack of all trades and a master of many.
