Haycox, a 1923 graduate of the University, recently returned from a trip to Greece where he obtained information for new stories. While in Greece, he served as special assistant to Dwight Griswold, President Truman's emissary to Greece. Haycox had the opportunity to take trips into the Greek back country. It is there that he obtained story backgrounds.

New Business School at OSC Clarified by President Newburn

In a statement issued Friday, President Harry K. Newburn clarified the University's position in regard to the proposed school of business administration at Oregon State college.

He said that representatives of the University were at the hearing and presented the University's definite objections to the proposed school.

Dr. Newburn said that it is the understanding of the University that a new BA school at Oregon State would be confined entirely to undergraduate levels and would not duplicate the functions of the University School of Business Administration.

The complete text of Dr. Newburn's statement:

"We were represented at the hearing and presented the University's serious objections to the proposed school. Naturally, we regret the decision.

"However, it is our understanding that the board action establishes a school of business and technology which will be confined to the undergraduate level, will be related clearly to the technical areas available at the State college, and will not duplicate in major fashion the functions of the University school of business administration. It remains to be seen whether this intent will be realized in practice."

University, OSC Long Compete For Right to Commercial Courses

By JUNE GOETZE

Possession of the school of business administration has long been a bone of contention between the University and Oregon state college. Even its very establishment at the University created a controversy.

In 1893 the University board of regents demanded that a commercial course be started in addition to the intellectual subjects approved by the faculty. John W. Johnson, then president of the University, bitterly opposed it.

As a result of his conflict with the regents caused by the question of the commercial courses and other contributing factors, he submitted his resignation.

In 1894 the board of regents insisted on the establishment of a one-year commercial course. It brought many new students to the University, but its success antagonized many of the private commercial colleges of the state. It also appeared to draw students away from many of the regular academic courses.

The following year the commercial course was revised to include more academic subjects.

The question of duplication first arose in 1913. Following an in-

Whitman College Plays Host to PNCC Delegates; Faculty Member, Students, to Represent U of O

By DON SMITH

Whitman college is making plans to have Oregon graduate of '46, Lois McConkey Putnam, and other Pacific Northwest College congress representatives sent to the United Nations, on hand at the third annual meet. March 3 to 6 has been set as the dates for the students to discuss world problems on the college campus in Walla Walla, Washington.

Student delegates Warren Miller and Bob Allen, senior and junior in political science, will be working this year to match the honor bestowed upon Mrs. Putnam in 1946. PNCC representatives to UN are chosen on the basis of the interest shown by the students of the home colleges in the resolutions suggested by PNCC.

Officially Received by UN

Mrs. Putnam, and Troy Strong of the College of Puget Sound, were the first representatives of a student organization to be received officially by the United Nations.

They presented the resolutions of the 1946 congress to the United States delegation.

Paris Cabaret Readied For Beaux Arts Ball

Herb Widmer Combo Slated to Play; Tickets Available Till 5 at Art School

"Anything goes" at the Beaux Arts ball tonight, at least in the way of costumes, according to Newt Crossfield, ticket manager for the annual affair sponsored by the school of art.

Gerlinger annex will be transformed into a Paris cabaret, with music by the Herb Widmer combo for the dance, which is open to all students. Admission is $1.75 a couple.

Tickets may be purchased till noon at the Co-op, till 5 p.m. at the art school office, and at the door tonight. Dancing will be from 9 to 12.

Diluted Version

Oregon's Beaux Arts ball is a diluted adaptation of the Quatre Arts ball, which is presented annually by the students of St. Germain des Pres in Paris.

Features of tonight's affair will be judging of best costumes, and entertainment provided by members of the art school. Complete abandon is the feature of the Paris forerunner, but the Oregon version is toned down to campus tastes.

Sing School Song

At the Paris ball the evening begins with the boisterous singing of the school song, "Ecole des Beaux Arts." After dining in Latin Quarter cafes, the students riot through Paris streets to their school.

The doors of the ball are locked at 11 p.m. and no one is permitted to leave until the following morning at 5.

Widmer and his combo are noted for their group singing and fancy patter numbers.

'Y' Plans Party For Frosh Gals

A supper and party is being planned by the junior and sophomore advisers to entertain the freshmen as a wind-up of the YWCA freshman commission program. All freshman girls who have been interested in the commission program are invited to attend the supper which will be held from 5 to 7 p.m. Thursday.

Weather permitting, the committee announces that the free supper may be turned into a picnic, but the meeting place will be the same—the YWCA Bungalow at 5 p.m. Girls who are planning are asked to contact Mary Stadelman, 2900, to facilitate planning of food.

Entertainment and mixer games are being planned by Bjorg Hansen and Bobbie Fuller. Committees working on the party are general arrangements, Beth Basler; food, Renee Cowell; publicity, Jeannine Macaulay; contact, Mary Stadelman, and transportation, Sally Mueller.

This will be the last scheduled event of the freshman commissions. Next term the six freshman commissions. Next term the six freshman commission groups will join to form next year's sophomore commission. Officers for the sophomore commission will be elected at the same election as the regular YWCA, WAA, and AWS officers early spring term.

Spring Sign-up Near Stand-still; 135 Registered

A liberal arts college regulation postponing enrollment for classes in that school until late next week continued yesterday to keep pre-registration for spring term at a near stand-still. But 22 students completed registration Friday.

Of the 3,333 students who have picked up registration material, approximately 135 have completed registering, it was announced at the office of the registrar. About 1,000 students have yet to pick up their material. It was believed that the liberal arts regulation was also responsible for the slow-up in that division. Heads of the departments of the liberal arts college met yesterday afternoon to discuss a possible revision of their registration procedure. But Dean Eldon Johnson, head of the school, said later in the day that he had no change to report. At present the registration procedure requires students enrolling in liberal arts courses to wait until March 4, 5, and 6 for stamping of class cards. Advising in the school will not take place until March 1, 2, and 3.

Orides Plan Potluck

Orides will have a potluck dinner at the YWCA bungalow at 5:30 p.m. Monday, their president, Trudy Penny, said yesterday.

originated with Mrs. William Haultine of the Portland League of Women Voters which, with Reed college, sponsored the first PNCC. This year's congress at Whitman is being sponsored by the host college and the Walla Walla Rotary club.

Dull Faculty Representative

One of the innovations of this year's congress is official faculty representatives from each of the colleges sending student delegates. Paul S. Dull, assistant professor of political science and history, is the University representative.

Speakers scheduled for the three-day congress include Olav Paus-Grunt, chief of the educational division of UNESCO, and Charles Leigh Wheeler, shipping and lumber executive of San Francisco, who will give the major talk for the section on the Marshall plan.

Catherine Crombie and Ted Hallock represented the University at the 1947 PNCC, also held at Reed college.
