

Two Brownings Viewed at Talk In Book Series

Selections from the writings of Robert and Elizabeth Barrett Browning will be presented at 7 tonight in the browsing room of the library, replacing the Greater Books series.

"This program of the Brownings will be the first contribution from the dramatic department for the regular Tuesday evening program," said Miss Bernice M. Rise, head of the circulation department. Other presentations by drama students are now being prepared for the weekly programs.

Participants Pat King, Jo Bjeland, Harold Larson, and Emelie Jackull are members of Mrs. Ottilie T. Seybolt's oral interpretation classes.

The program will be made up of Robert Browning's monologues and Elizabeth Barrett Browning's sonnets. The monologues will be "A Light Woman," from the dramatic personae group, "Youth and Art" from the dramatic romance group, and "The Laboratory," "Evelyn Hope," and "Up at a Villa, Down in the City," from the dramatic lyric group.

Little Things Count in the World, Portland Writer Tells Festival

By DIANA DYE

"Our ability to put the world together does not depend on great intentions but on the little stubborn facts we run into," said Ernest Haycox, Portland author, when he spoke to an International Festival luncheon audience at the Eugene hotel Saturday afternoon on "Good Intentions Are Never Enough."

Haycox, who returned from a special mission to Greece in December declared that "Greece is a test tube." The situation found there is similar in every European country today.

Investigators Visit

Dwight Griswold, President Truman's special emissary to Greece, led a 250-man mission to that country. The purposes of the mission are (1) to restore the economy of Greece and (2) to resist the spread of communism, Haycox said.

The author cited reasons for the Greek post-war difficulties. They have not recovered from their post-war difficulties as most of the European states have, he continued. Everything in Greece has collapsed and the present status is not as good as it was in June, 1947. Sixty per cent of Greece is in a fear zone, he added. The Greeks are influenced by an underlying fear of invasion and are uncertain of the future, he emphasized.

Cash Inflated

Adding to the troubles of the nation is the currency inflation. As yet, no way has been found to stabilize the currency and the drachma is worth practically nothing in foreign exchange, Haycox continued. The Greeks have learned to stay alive. All the average citizen is assured from his wages is one-fourth of a loaf of bread, the author said. It is not uncommon to see a person drop dead on the streets of Athens, the author added.

The Greek bureaucracy presents a third post war difficulty, Haycox asserted. Leadership is badly needed, he said. The bureaucracy is quite inefficient and "The problem is not what kind of ideals a person has, but who can make the government function," the speaker declared.

Uncertainty

Another major difficulty facing those who are helping to restore Greece is the uncertainty that is present all over the nation. The national will to fight is weak, Haycox said. "The Greek has become a solitary animal because of his battle of survival," he continued.

In Greece is an ancient civilization and the Greeks are among the world's best people, he declared. They are natively intelligent and thoroughly democratic, he said. "But everything has happened to the Greeks. Having seen his house burned and his country pillaged, the Greek citizen is not sure about the future."

Losé Spirit

The course of events in the last few years has put out the fiery spirit of the Greeks to band together for the common good, the author said.

The Russians, Haycox believes, think that the Americans will not support the present foreign policy in Europe and that in the long run, will get discouraged and pull out.

Russia, Haycox said, has put ten cents into the contest in Europe and has come out with short run advantages; the Americans are putting $10 bills into the scrimmage and will benefit with long-run results.
