Tiny 'Dover Road' Actress Longs For Role of a Mean Woman

By PAT KING

Diminutive, gray eyed Louise Clouston perched on the edge of a table and determinedly announced she wants to play a mean, nasty woman. Her red gold curls nodded in agreement as the sophomore in drama expressed her wish to play Blanche in the current Broadway hit "A Streetcar Named Desire."

But, instead of being a meanie, Louise is playing the role of Eustacia in "The Dover Road," to be presented Mar. 4, 5, 6, 9, 10, and 11 by the University Theater. Eustacia is "one of those dear, sweet women who must always cosset or be cosseted." As the wife of Leonard (Dick Rayburn), who has run away with Anne (Grace Hoffman) she meets the two elopers at a country home with Nicholas (Gerald Lundy), the man with whom she is also eloping.

Consider Choices

The two couples are forcibly detained by Mr. Latimer (Bob Over) in his luxurious country home on the road to Dover in order that they may have time to sit down and carefully consider their choices.

Louise shares her role with Sue Fernimen, senior in psychology and last year's Junior Weekend Queen.

"It really is advantageous for both of us to play the same role because we can watch each other go through the part and gather many pointers for our individual interpretations," she said. "The most difficult thing about the play (Please turn to page three)

Registrar Announces New Card Regulation

Procedure for Spring Pre-Registration Requires All to Carry Out Extra Step

A new regulation for spring term pre-registration, designed to insure getting class cards to instructors by the beginning of spring term, was announced yesterday by Registrar C. E. Avery.

Beginning immediately, students are requested to pick up "class program" cards, which are to be filled in with the student's attendance schedules and turned in with other registration material at the cashier's office.

Avery said he realized the additional procedure was "asking the student to do one more thing" and that he regretted it very much. However, he said, "this is the only efficient way to handle the present situation."

Some Won't Have To

Those students who have already completed registration will not be required to fill out the additional card, Avery added.

By the new move, registration should be completed in such a way that class cards for an expected 5,100 enrollees may be turned over to instructors, and the registrar's office can make its records from the schedule cards, Avery declared.

May Be Obtained Anytime

The new cards may be secured at the registrar's office in Emerald hall at any time, or at the dean's offices when getting housing checks. The registrar stressed that the student would save time by filling out the card early, rather than waiting until the last minute, although they are simple and will take but a short time to fill out.

Avery said the new regulation was the only way in which his office could get out student's grades at the expected time and still pass cards on to instructors.

1600 to 60

Of the 5,100 expected to enroll, 3,949 had picked up registration material by yesterday afternoon, the seventh day of spring term pre-registration. About 1,600 students have yet to pick up material.

Two hundred and three had completed registering, as compared with 2,400 at the same time last term.

Adviser counseling in the liberal arts college, which had been postponed for one week of pre-registration, began Monday. Stamping of cards in the school, which has been responsible for a tie-up in registration, is to begin Thursday morning and will continue until Saturday noon. Students who do not have all cards stamped by that date must wait until March 29 to complete enrollment.

However final registration procedures, including the registrar's check, housing check, and payment of fees, will be carried into next week, he reported.

In order to speed lines and avoid confusion during the final three days of pre-registration, Avery said, registration check will be made in a special room on the second floor of Emerald hall. Five special clerks will take care of the students.

The hospital school gives treatments to spastic and athetoid cases, in which the muscles are unable to respond properly.

Other implements which are used to help strengthen various muscles are a loom, an electric typewriter, modeling clay, walking bars, "skis," wood working, and button boards.

Objective of the society is to provide a rehabilitation center in Portland. The home, would give care to the type of case which has reached a technical cure, but without the proper convalescent care could result in a same similar to rheumatic fever.

Another objective of the society is a plan for home-bound treatment, which would provide aid for people who live in sections not heavily enough populated to have a hospital.
