

Clifford Weigle Chosen Dean Of Journalism

Clifford F. Weigle, newly appointed dean of the school of journalism, will assume his duties at the University on July 1, replacing Dean George S. Turnbull, who will retire June 30.

Weigle is now at the University of Minnesota, studying toward his doctor's degree. He is on leave from Stanford university where he is an associate professor in the department of journalism.

Receiving his B.A. in 1929 from Stanford and his M.A. in 1936, also from Stanford, Weigle did advanced graduate work at the University of California and Stanford. He has done considerable work in practical journalism, both in circulation and editorial work. He was in the circulation department of the San Francisco News for three years, and later in the editorial department for five years.

In 1934 he became an instructor in journalism at Stanford, in 1937 he was appointed assistant professor. He became an associate professor in 1942. In addition to teaching, he was Stanford's publicity director from 1943 to 1944.

Weigle is a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Sigma Delta Chi, and Alpha Delta Sigma.

Editor Announces New Appointment

Appointment of Miss Barbara Heywood as associate editor of the Emerald for spring term was announced Tuesday by Bob Frazier, Emerald editor.

Miss Heywood, a sophomore in journalism, will replace Walt McKinney who is not in school spring term. She will write editorials, and help with production of the Emerald editorial page, Frazier said.

Emerald Jobs Open

Students who wish to work as Emerald reporters, copydesk workers, and night staff workers are asked to meet Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in room 105, Journalism building.

Students who worked for the Emerald last term are also asked to be present.

Creative Thought Series Opens With City and Regional Planning

The new art of the twentieth century, as expressed in regional and city planning will be discussed tonight in the first lecture of the University "Currents of Creative Thought" series.

Dr. Wallace Baldinger, associate professor of art in the University, will lecture on how the forms of the region, the city, and the neighborhood affect our lives and influence environmental planning. Tonight's lecture and all further meetings in this series will be held in the browsing room of the University library, at 7:30 p. m. on Wednesday evenings. The discussions will be illustrated with pictures, slides, recordings, displays, and readings

Scheduled for later lectures are "Architecture Today," by Marion D. Ross, assistant professor of architecture, on April 7. This discussion will consider contemporary architecture, with special emphasis upon domestic examples, and the qualities of "space" and "grid."

Mark Sponenburgh, instructor in art, will speak on "Problems of the Contemporary Sculptor," on April 14. "Contemporary Painting" will be the subject of the April 21 lecture by David McCosh, assistant professor of art. The final April lecture, to be presented April 28, will cover "Arts in the Home," discussed by Jean Kendall, assistant professor of art education.

A second lecture by Miss Kendall on May 5 will cover "Art Through Education — Education Through Art," a survey of the current art education program in the state of Oregon. "Three Modern Master Musicians," a survey of the theories, works, and influence of three leading musical thinkers of the twentieth century, Schoenberg, Bartok, and Stravinsky, will be presented May 12 by Dr. Edmund Cykler, associate professor of musicology.

A discussion of four operatic masterpieces, by Debussy, Richard Strauss, Berg, and Puccini, will be conducted by Dr. Arnold Elston, associate professor of music, in his May 19 lecture on "Twentieth Century Opera." Dr. Hoyt Trowbridge, professor of English, will lecture on "The Earlier Works of James Joyce," on May 26. Dr. Trowbridge will review two of Joyce's short novels and a collection of his short stories.

The principal ideas and preoccupations of Andre Gide will be reviewed by Dr. Laurence LeSage, Assistant professor of Romance Languages, on June 2. The final lecture in the series will be presented by Dr. Bertram Jessup, assistant professor of philosophy, when he will discuss the "Existentialist Novel" on June 9. Jean Paul Sarte and Albert Camus, two of the outstanding writers of this movement, will receive special consideration in Dr. Jessup's lecture.

The new extension division lecture series is open to the general public, but will not carry University credit. Miss Bernice Rise, circulation librarian, will be in charge of reference materials and browsing room displays. Registration fee for the course will be $7.00.

How many operators will we need NEXT YEAR?

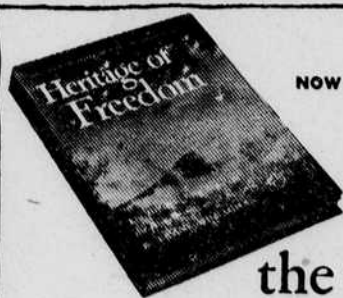

This is but one of the many questions telephone men are called upon to answer.

Part of their work has always been to anticipate demands for personnel . . . to determine what additional equipment must be provided, what new construction will be necessary to handle the constantly increasing demands for service.

Careful planning in every phase of telephone work requires the services of many qualified men. For them, this growing business offers the opportunity for active, interesting careers.

There's a future in telephony.
