Chemistry Research Advanced

Special $2,000 Award Designated For Grad Student

A $2,000 grant for research in colloid chemistry has been awarded to the University by the Research Corporation, it was announced yesterday by Dr. Robert B. Dean, assistant professor of chemistry.

The work will be done by a graduate student for his doctor's thesis.

Dr. Dean expects to announce the name of the graduate student in the near future.

The research project is entitled "forces of attraction between molecules of vapors and molecules of water." It is the study of extremely thin films on the surface of water and their behavior when exposed to benzene and other organic vapors. The results may have a bearing in the choice of solvents for industrial and other purposes.

The Research Corporation is a non-profit organization which utilizes the proceeds from applied research for further advancement of science. Assistance is provided by scientists by providing them with funds to pursue desired research.

Mike Destroys Loves' Virtues For 'Midsummer Night's' Hero

DON SMITH

You may think that making love to a beautiful girl is the easiest thing in the world, but have you ever done it with a microphone separating you for three feet, not to mention trying to control an active cold in the head?

According to Don Smith, who plays one of the leading romantic roles as Lysander in the University theater production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" to be presented April 24, it is anything but wonderful. Carolyn Lively who plays Hermia, his lady love, is complicating matters even further with a respectable cold of her own.

"We'll both probably be lugging kleenex around with us Saturday night," Smith offered dismally.

As the gay, impulsive Lysander, Smith will play the first role of his acting career which nearly approximates his own age. His last appearance in the Guild theater was in "The Dover Road" as Dom-

Co-op Nominations, Revisions To Come Up at Thursday Meet

Nominations for three positions for next year's Co-op board, voting on revisions to the by-laws of the Co-op association and an explanation of the patronage refund system will be the main business when the Student Cooperative association meets Thursday at 4 p. m. in room 207 Chapman.

Anyone who is a member of the Co-op association may attend, according to Co-op board President Gloria Grenfell.

Nominations to be made will be for the one sophomore representative on the board next year and for the two junior members next year. This year's junior members will fill the senior members' posts next fall.

Nominees for the positions are to be members of this year's freshman or sophomore class and only stipulation is that the candidate must have a 2:00 GPA or better, Miss Grenfell said. Several people should be nominated for each post, she said. Elections will be held at the same time as the student body election later this spring.

Other business of the meeting will be an explanation of the patronage refund system by the old and new manager of the Co-op and the board members.

Previously the refund has been made before the end of spring term, but the refund will not be made this year until after a complete audit has been made early this summer. The board will meet after the audit to determine the amount to be refunded.

Since the Co-op institution was drawn up in 1920, Miss Grenfell explained, many of the by-laws have become out-dated. This year the board has revised the by-laws in an effort to make them more functional and these revised by-laws will be presented and voted upon at the meeting, Miss Grenfell said.

Festival Committee Heads Announced

Committee heads of the Junior Weekend song festival, announced by Jordis Benke, general chairman, are:

Alex Murphy, assistant chairman; Marcia Summers, preliminary elimination chairman; Ann Woodworth, program; Ann Gillinwater and Barbara Stevenson, decorations; Margaret Harrison, seating arrangement; and Barry Mountain and Frank Rauch, publicity.

Early 2 to 1 Margin Being Piled Up By Anti-Communists

ROME, Tuesday, April 20—(UP)—Anti-Communist parties took a two-to-one lead today in partial returns for the senate and in the first fragmentary returns for the chamber of deputies.

Unofficial returns were in for about 10 per cent of the country's 41,468 election districts in the voting for senate seats under a system of proportional representation.

At 4 a. m. (9 p. m. EST) the unofficial standings were:

Anti-Communist: Christian Democrats 1,980,546, Independent socialist 389,427, National bloc 116,685; Communist front: 1,212,150.

The first official returns given by the ministry of interior for the 574 seats in the national assembly were for 122 out of 530 precincts in the Como district of far northern Italy. They were a drop in an ocean of national votes. But they, too, gave a big lead of the parties which want to keep Italy on the side of the western democracies.

People Eager

Returns poured into the Interior Ministry throughout the night and until early hours crowds of eager townspeople massed around loud speakers.

Newspapers started to proclaim an anti-communist victory in this momentous election.

The independent Il Messaggero, Rome's most reliable newspaper, said:

"Almost everywhere the Communist front is beaten, and in a degree exceeding every forecast. And everywhere the Christian Democrats have obtained an unforeseen success. The reason? The Italian people wished to register its total, decisive, radical opposition to communism."

Experts Warn

Conservative political experts warned against over-optimism on the basis of partial figures. They said also that senate returns did not necessarily mean that national assembly figures would be the same.

At least, on this morning after two days of voting in an election which will be felt around the world, the anti-communists were running far ahead. In the senate vote, even in the communist strongholds of the north, the anti-communists were leading.

First official complete returns for 600 Rome precincts in senate voting gave the anti-communists 265,206 votes. The communist front got 75,311. This was better than a three to one lead.

The first official tabulation for Rome's assembly seats gave the figures for 100 of 1,473 precincts. They gave the anti-communists a lead of more than three to one.

Is It Hot Down There Adolph?

If one Adolph Hitler had stuck to paperhanging instead of dabbling in German politics he would be celebrating his fifty-ninth birthday today.

According to World Almanac, the former German Fuehrer met death in his command post in Berlin on May 1, 1945.
