

Public Service Employment Pay Scheduled Here Next Tuesday

Tuesday, April 27 will be, "on a modest scale," Public Service Employment Day on the campus. A conference on public service employment at the university level is planned for that afternoon, with chances for students to interview visiting speakers who represent various public services.

Joint announcement of the conference was made Thursday by

Library Contest Entries Called For By May 6

Students should get their entries in for the student library contest soon, according to Miss Bernice Rise, head of circulation and reader's consultant of the library. So far over 30 entries have been made, she said. Students may enter the contest until May 6, and application blanks are available at the circulation desk in the library.

Held Library Day, May 8, the contest is open to all undergraduate and graduate students who have libraries they wish to display. The contest is in three divisions: the undergraduate general libraries, sponsored by the University Co-op; the undergraduate specialized libraries, sponsored by the Association of Patrons and Friends of the University Library; and the graduate student general libraries, with emphasis on a special field, also sponsored by the Patrons and Friends of the University library.

Entries for any of these categories should have less than 50 books, all bearing definite marks of ownership. The books will be on display in the library May 8 and 9.

Last year's entries numbered 44, and the winners in the graduate division were Mrs. Betty Mae Payne, first; Fredrick Waller, second; and Howard Zimmerman, third. Winners of the undergraduate general group were: Leland Huff, first; Wesley Waters, second; and Patrick O'Connor, third. In the undergraduate special libraries Arnold Shotwell was first; Boris Malkin, second; and Phyllis Wells, third.

Press Contest Victors Named

Winners of the annual Oregon high school press association contest were announced yesterday by Dean George S. Turnbull of the journalism school.

In the sixteenth awarding of recognition to outstanding high school papers throughout the state, the Klamath Krater of Klamath Falls won the Arnold Bennett Hall trophy for best all-around paper in the state.

Winner of the Eugene Register-Guard cup for the best paper in schools with over 500 enrollment was the Salem High Clarion. Second prize went to the Eugene High School News and the Franklin High Post of Portland was third. The Lincoln Cardinal of Portland and the Beaverton Hummer tied for fourth place.

There were 66 entries from all over the state this year and judging was close, according to Dean Turnbull. He said that competition becomes rougher each year as the quality of high school papers visibly increases. There has been constant improvement since the first contest in 1929, he said.

You cannot help small men by tearing down big men.

Dean E. L. Johnson of the college of liberal arts, Dean Victor P. Morris of the school of business administration, and Karl W. Onthank, dean of personnel administration.

The conference for students will open its general session at 2 p. m. in 105 Commerce. A speaking panel will consider public service employment with the federal government, state governments, and municipal governments.

Speakers will be Merrill Collett, chairman of the Federal Personnel Council, Portland area, and Director of Personnel, Bonneville Power Administration; A. C. Huntley, superintendent of training, Oregon State Civil Service; and Herman Kehrl, director of Bureau of Municipal Research, and executive secretary, League of Oregon Cities.

Following the general session will be group meetings at 3 and 4 p. m., on the general subjects of economics, public administration, and city management, social work, accounting and auditing, public personnel administration, physical science, biological science.

After group meetings, students will have an opportunity to be interviewed individually by the speakers. The conference is intended to give students comprehensive information on the field before graduation, Dean Onthank said. "We hope to cover a wider range at the university level than is commonly understood," he added.

New Library Lights 'Just Like Daylight'

"Just like daylight" are the lights recently installed at the library. Fluorescent lighting fixtures were put in the reference, recent periodical, and reserve reading rooms this week.

Delivery of the fixtures was delayed because of difficulty in securing the special eight-foot tubes.

new system, the patronage refund will not be made until after a complete audit early this summer. By doing this, he said, the board will be able to find out exactly how much money the co-op has the audit the board will meet to before it starts to return it. After the audit, the board will then decide upon the amount of the refund and the checks will then be sent to members, Henson said.

Another Change

Another change which will take place next year will be that students will be asked to save their purchase tickets until the end of the year instead of turning them in at the time of the purchase. The present system, Henson said, has proved too expensive as it has been necessary to have several employees filing the tickets, adding about $4,000 to the cost for operating the store.

With the side remark that this year the total sales of the co-op are expected to hit near the half million dollar mark, McClain presented the store's financial report showing the costs and the profit of the store.

Out of every dollar purchase, he said, 21.7 cents are used for store expenses, 13.2 cents are used for salaries, 3.4 cents are used for administrative expenses, 4.2 cents are used for taxes and 78.3 cents are used to purchase the goods.

Approximately 150 attended the annual meeting, which was presided over by Gloria Grenfell, senior member and co-op board president.

Bids to Be Announced

Bids for the addition to the University music building are to be out at 10:30 a.m. today. More complete information concerning the plans will be released next week-end.
