School in Peru Puts Emphasis On Interest, Professor Relates

By ANNE GOODMAN

Valued more than a final exam at the University of San Marcos, in Lima, Peru, is a "concept" grade, based on the student's interest in the course he is taking.

So said Dr. Fernando Romero, visiting professor from the oldest university in the western hemisphere, yesterday when comparing United States colleges with those below the border.

Politics Interest

Schools in each place are "much similar," he asserted, but South American students do not place as much emphasis on athletic events. However, they are "highly interested in politics," he added.

Dr. Romero is touring American universities to encourage graduate students, teachers, and undergraduates to study at San Marcos, either during the summer session or the regular season.

During his seven-hour stay, the tanned professor described San Marcos university as "very old and small, while your campus is very large and pretty."

San Marcos has no campus, since the buildings are spread throughout the city, and all students live in private homes, not dormitories or sororities. For this reason there is no campus life, but dances and other social functions are held.

Similar to freshman initiations in America, are the rules imposed on freshman boys in Peru. They must cut their hair very short and wear "boinas," or small blue caps.

The teacher of the history of Peruvian arts believes that "girls are much better students than the boys," because they work harder.

The annual tuition at San Marcos is $6, and the monthly cost of living for students adds up to only $50.

Dr. Romero describes himself as "a very good friend of the United States." He began teaching in Peru last November after resigning as a naval officer and is now the advisor of all American students at the university.

Understanding Advocated

Turning to the relationship between the United States and South America, the professor believes that "if we want to make a continent, we will have to understand each other closely."

He left Lima April 24, has been through Mexico City, San Diego, Los Angeles, Seattle, Chicago, New York, and Washington, and will return home by May 10.

Lutherans to Meet

Lutheran students association will conduct a Bible study at the YMCA at 9:15 Sunday morning. The subject will be Romans 4. Breakfast will be served.

"In Democracy" will be discussed by the group at their supper meeting at the YWCA from 5:30 to 8 p.m. Sunday. Dr. Quirinus Breen, professor of history, will be the speaker and discussion leader.

Rushees, Attention

All rushees whose names have been on the rush list for two weeks are to file preference cards at the dean of women's office on Monday at 12:45 p.m., according to Margaret Rauch, president of Panhellenic.

Kids Included In Party Plans

A party night, open to all University students and Eugene towns people will be held Saturday evening at the new Friendly house, according to Mrs. J. D. Bryant, hostess. Refreshments, games, dancing and fellowship will all be included in the program. Young married couples are especially invited to come and bring their children. A special toy room is provided for the youngsters.

Sunday morning at the weekly "Fellowship hour," Jim Bryant will speak and lead a discussion period starting at 11 a.m.

Friendly house is at Eleventh and Ferry streets.

Vargas-Baron Sets Westminster Talk

Speaker and discussion leader for the Westminster house forum at 6:30 Sunday evening will be Anibal Vargas-Baron, assistant professor of Romance languages. His subject will be the implications of the recent riot in Bogata. Moderator for the evening will be Robin Gilbert, junior in business administration.

Wesley Confab Slates Lawyer

Paul Geddes, Roseburg lawyer, will be featured speaker of the Wesley house discussion group on "Love, Courtship, and Marriage" Sunday evening during the regular "University of Life" program.

Speakers in the other two groups will be Dr. Paul Means, head of the University religion department, who will speak on "Mohammedism" to the group on "Comparative Religions," and Rev. David Seaman director of Wesley house, who will speak to the group on "Understanding the Bible" on the subject of "Man".

A fellowship sing, led by Bob Kingsbury, will start the evening at 5 p.m., followed by a snack supper and devotions. The discussion groups will start at 6:30 p.m. University students and their friends are invited.

Whoops—Violators

Wiley and his assistants are warning that the wearing of class pants by the men will be especially enforced. A member of each house has been appointed to check for violators.

Dunking and hacking will also be part of the entertainment at the picnic at 12:15 p.m. May 8. Students will be apprehended for wearing white in addition to violation of other traditions.

In memory of Bill Hayward, a new tradition is being inaugurated by the Order of the O. Freshmen appointed from each house to scrub the Oregon seal will also be sent to McArthur court to clean the Bill Hayward trophy and other award emblems which have been placed in the trophy case. It is hoped that this ceremony will become a regular tradition to be observed each year.

Hendricks Downs Tri-Delts by 17 to 2

Women's softball season opened Monday when Heendricks hall downed Delta Delta Delta by a score of 17 to 2. Genevieve Siskey, for Hendricks, pitched a scoreless inning, but it was only scoreless until Hendricks came up to bat. Miss Siskey made a home-run and the other players crossed the plate in rapid succession, making a total of 14 runs in the first inning for Hendricks.

In the second inning, Hendricks again came through with three scores. Tri Delt struck back in the third inning with two scores.
