

Senior to Get Special Plaque At Banquet

Oregana plaque will be presented to the senior who has contributed the most time and inspiration to the yearbook staff this year at the annual banquet tomorrow night in the Eugene hotel.

Beginning at 6:30, the banquet will be in the Persian room, instead of east dining room as was written on invitations.

Larry Davidson, chairman, said Monday that more than 60 invitations have been accepted. Davidson was an associate editor on the 1948 Oregana.

Besides the plaque, 27 certificates will be awarded to students who devoted time and interest to this year's book.

According to Davidson, six 1948 Oreganas will be previewed at the banquet.

The program has been arranged by Laura Olson, an associate editor. It includes numbers by the Alpha Gamma Delta trio and Mary Stadelman, harpist.

Awards will be presented by

No walking on the Oregon seal. Only seniors may sit on the senior bench near the Pioneer Mother.

All freshman girls must wear green ribbons; frosh men, the Oregon lid.

All men must wear their "class" pants.

Lecturer Gives Religious Views

By WALLY HUMPHRIES

"I believe religion is committing oneself into the power and keeping of what one holds to be the source of human good; to serve it, obey it, and be transformed by it," was the explanatory statement made by Dr. Henry N. Wieman in his lecture on "The Predicaments of Religious Inquiry," Thursday evening in Chapman hall.

The difference between the ideals in morality and the principles of religion were fully explained, the major difference being that in morality man strives to make himself the being that he hopes to be, whereas, in religion,

Ross Yates, editor of the 1948 yearbook, and Miss Olga Yevtich, business manager for this year and next year.

Both Yates and Miss Yevtich will give speeches. Miss Trudi Chernis, recently appointed editor for 1949, and Dick Williams, educational activities manager, will also speak.

he strives to attain a commitment to an extra-human being that will perform the transformation.

Religions Problems

Therefore, the problems of religious inquiry are two-fold, according to Dr. Wieman; the first being commitment is to be made, and the decision of what, in whom, the second the ascertaining of the conditions which would make it successful.

The study of these problems is what is known as religious thought which at the present time is suffering a period of complete exclusion from the institutions of higher learning in this country as well as in most of the world. This fact is of extreme importance, since religion degenerates and is capable of becoming a stron evil force when it is accompanied by ignorance.

Must Realize

"The universities must realize this situation and strive to include in their curriculums some type of course which would stress the inquiry into religious thought in such a way that the great mass of educated people would have a sufficient background in religious inquiry along with their field of greatest proefficiency," was the way Dr. Wieman expressed the great problem of religious education we face today. Although this is entirely impossible of completion immediately, it is hoped that the many related fields now in the colleges, such as psychology and philosophy, will be able to provide sufficiently educated personnel to get the program started.

Dr. Wieman, visiting professor of religion on the University campus, is on leave from the University of Chicago where he is acknowledged as one of this countries outstanding authorities in the field of religious thought. This was the first of a series of three lectures sponsored by the University Lectures Committee to be given by Dr. Wieman.

Alumni Recall Fetes

Weekends. "A girl was poised on her Chinese pagoda canoe when it started to tip. She calmly folded her parasol, stood up, and jumped into the millrace as if it were all a part of the act." Mrs. Turnbull, class of 1923, thought this happened in a weekend about 15 years ago.

Dean Karl W. Onthank of personnel administration, also thinks of the canoe fetes when he remembers Junior Weekends. He said he has been on many campuses, but "nothing could compare with the canoe fetes for distinction and beauty."

Favorite of Dean Onthank, class of '13, was about the 1924 celebration, "first year when the weekend was done on a grand scale."

Because "I have seen so many good ones," Miss Gladys Kerlee, class of '24, could not find a favorite. However, she agreed that the canoe fete was Junior Weekend. Miss Kerlee is now secretary to President H. K. Newburn.
