

Miller Receives Annual Plaque At '48 Banquet

Presented by Ross Yates, editor of the 1948 Oregana, the plaque is given to a senior staff member every year.

About 63 yearbook workers and guests attended the banquet in the Eugene hotel. It was arranged by Laura Olson and Larry Davidson, both staff members.

Oregana certificates of achievement were presented to Ruthe Reagan, Ann Morton, Helen Sherman, Don Smith, Janet Beigal, Helen Gatewood, Marjorie Petersen, Billie Jean Riethmiller, Betty Stone, Marilyn Vogt, Gordon Schoeur, Nancy Peterson, Diane Rye, Larry Davidson and Laura Olson.

Better Foreign Policy

Military Strength Needed for Peace

The military strength of the U.S. must be built up not for war but for peace, he believed. He called for continued development of atomic weapons, and increased air power.

"America will never wage a war of aggression," he claimed. "Every American knows this, and so do most of the people in the world."

Seventh point made by Dewey was for America to "keep cool." "The communist scheme of aggression is world wide in its scope," according to Dewey. "Pressure and crises shift from Europe to Asia to Palestine to Italy."

A war of nerves is the way Dewey described the communist form of action. He believed the Italian victory is only a preliminary victory which will give the United States the chance to go ahead and do its job.

Program for United Europe

"Western Europe is an open invitation to war," the Republican hopeful said. "A unified, revitalized Europe will be a bastion of peace in a stable world."

Economic barriers must be removed, it was Dewey's belief, and a defense unity, stable currencies established, political unity, and freedom of exchange are necessary for a United States of Europe.

Europe as it was in America, according to Dewey. He cited numerous conferences and plans for conferences in Europe today as precludes to such a unification.

America should lead a moral crusade in the cause of liberty, justice, and decency to win the peace.

"We can win it," he declared, "by mobilization of talents and the will for freedom. We can lead the world to security and lasting peace."

Dewey Feels UMT, Draft Necessity

Dewey answered a straightforward "yes" to the question asking if he was in favor of UMT and draft. He elaborated by saying he hated it, but would rather have his country safely defended, than have his country caught short because it was weak and unable to defend itself.

Dean Orlando Hollis of the school of law introduced the speaker. The lecture was sponsored by the University assembly committee, headed by Warren C. Price.
