

Law Students Argue Tonight In Fenton

Oral arguments at the University of Oregon school of law move into the semi-final round tonight at 7:15 in room 307, Fenton hall, when the first argument in the series of three will be presented, student Chairman Avery A. Combs announced Wednesday.

All those interested are invited to attend, Combs said.

Grauber v. Marks is the case to be argued. Attorneys for the appellant will be John C. O'Kief and Curtis W. Cutsforth. Representing the respondent will be Donnell S. Clinch and Wally P. Martin.

Hearing the case will be a court consisting of law school faculty member Philip Lowry as chief justice and students William J. Moshofsky and Richard R. Carney as associate justices.

The remaining two arguments of the series will be held on Monday evening, May 10, and on Wednesday evening, May 12, said Chairman Combs.

The batteries of attorneys for these arguments are made up of first-year students in law. The cases argued are hypothetical, and procedure is similar to that which is involved in arguing a case on appeal before the supreme court of Oregon.

Faculty adviser for the arguments is Professor Allan H. Smith of the school of law.

Business Confab Closes Today; Dean Morris to Give Final Talk

"Closing the gap between the classroom and the active business world is one of the most perplexing tasks facing modern educators," Dean Victor P. Morris said yesterday in commenting on results of the seventh annual student business conference which has been conducted the past two days by the school of business administration. "But, we're bridging that gulf," declared Dean Morris. "This series of conferences is giving students an opportunity to meet men active in the business world and to form their own opinions about specific vocational areas within the field," he said.

He emphasized too, that many businessmen have become more closely acquainted with the faculty and their problems. Members of the teaching staff have welcomed advice and suggestions from men in the field. "This co-operation is sure to result in closer correlation, which will accrue to the students' benefit," he added. Attendance at the first two days' meetings has been large and constant. Many of the businessmen taking part in the conference have expressed their pleasure at the student interest shown. The dean expressed his gratitude to the speakers who were making the meet an outstanding success. "Many of these men have taken time out from their jobs to help with the conference. Their interest and cooperation is sincerely appreciated by the school of business administration," Dean Morris said.

Today's closing session will start at 2:00 p.m. with George E. Chapman, sales manager of Swift & Co., of Portland, addressing one group on "wholesaling and sales management." In another conference Harold P. Drake, agency manager of Equitable Life Insurance Co. of Portland will speak on "Life Insurance" for half of the period, and Earl Beeson of the Beeson-Hall Agency of Eugene will discuss "property and casualty insurance."

At 3:30 p.m. Dean Morris will bring the conference to a close in the YMCA recreation room with an address on "getting in touch with a job." He will give practical guidance in procedure to be following in applying for a job, and a review of opportunities in different business fields.

Jupe May Not Bless

(Continued from page one) men behind the weather charts, declined to comment on their boss's plans for the coming Weekend. From the way things look, one of them said, a cloudless sky is in order. But, he quickly added, old Jupe can import a storm all the way from Japan before Saturday if he wants to.

So that's the way things weatherly line up. The committee is confident, the Emerald is running its fair-weather editorial, and Jupe has given his conditional promise of good weather. But the final verdict, like the identity of the Queen, won't be known until the Weekend rolls around.

Tradition is against it, but the old boy who rules the weather may very well spill his water bucket on Eugene during Junior Weekend for the first time in 58 years.

Zounds! You're Slipping, Wiley

Smoking on the old campus! This most terrible of all offenses to the glorious traditions of Junior Weekend was being blissfully indulged in yesterday by a cords-clad character, when of a sudden, the bushes in front of Fenton rustled and he perceived someone watching him.

Zounds! Spies from Order of the O! he thought, swallowing a mouthful of smoke and hiding the cigarette in his pocket as nonchalantly as one can hide a
