You Cad, Monsieur

These two eighteenth century French "social dogs" about to engage in a friendly little slapping match are William Putnam, left, and James McMullen, members of the cast of "Beggar's Opera." The All-Student production opened last night in the music school auditorium for a three-day run.

Effective Comic Opera Includes Colorful Props

By NADINE HUTCHINSON

Theater-goers can be assured of an enjoyable evening at the performance of "Beggar's Opera," which opened last night at the music school auditorium. The production effectively combined rollicking music, colorful costumes and setting, and as picturesque a cast as ever walked a stage.

The University school of music presentation ably produced and directed by Herman Gelhausen had all the appearances of a professional offering.

Camel Handout Slated at Co-op

Some Oregon students will have a chance to "Walk a Mile for a Camel" today and tomorrow if they live at Twenty-third and Willamette or Thirty-first and University.

The R. H. Reynolds Tobacco company will give away free to every student of the University a package of Camel cigarettes in a plastic case bearing the initials OU for Oregon university.

As part of a nationwide campaign, Hugh V. Connelly, division manager, and several assistants will establish headquarters this morning in the Co-op store. Connelly said that he will ask students to show their registration cards to limit each student to one package. However, there is no official connection to the plan.

He estimates that the company will give away approximately 5,000 of the cases and packages of cigarettes at a cost of several thousand dollars.

The clear soprano tones of Mary Margaret Dundore, who portrayed Polly, the feminine romantic lead, suited the role to perfection. The part of MacHeath was capably filled by Wayne Sherwood, whose purposely exaggerated acting was especially effective. Virginia Walker, as Lucy, one of the four wives of MacHeath, provided a marked contrast to Miss Dundore's Polly, who also claimed MacHeath as spouse.

Adding both subtle and rough-house humor with jigs and sly remarks were William Putnam as the jailer, Lockit, and James McMullen, Polly's father. Robert Fulton, James Kays, Treva Rice and Jean Lichty succeeded in maintaining the high calibre of the acting throughout.

The opera, written by John Gay in the early eighteenth century is a lively satire of the political situation existing in the England of that period. The conditions which engendered the satire have passed but the entertainment value remains undiminished. The statement "politics are ephemeral but art endures," could no better be illustrated than in this vigorous production.

The music was taken from English folk tunes and the popular ballads.

Professor Ends Talks On Religion

Visiting Chicagoan Concludes Series Tonight in Chapman

Dr. Henry N. Wieman, visiting professor of religion, will conclude the spring term University lecture series tonight at 8 in room 207 Chapman hall. Dr. Wieman's subject will be "The Moral Directive in History."

Professor of the philosophy of religion at the University of Chicago, Dr. Wieman, is teaching two courses here this term: Philosophy of Religion and The Contemporary Crisis of Civilization.

For several years Dr. Wieman has been studying the destructive factors inherent in modern civilization.

Dr. Wieman has said that in the past man did not have the power to throw things out of balance, but today with his control over nature and his methods of regimentation, the possibilities of perverting the direction of human growth are appalling. Hence, the need to keep the best that man builds, even the best of which man dreams, under the criticism that comes from God who transcends man.

Dr. Wieman, Author

Among Dr. Wieman's books, in which the problems of religious inquiry and scientific method are explored, are: "The Wrestle of Religion With Truth," "Normative Psychology of Religion," "American Philosophies of Religion," "The Source of Human Good," "The Issues of Life" and "Now We Must Choose."

Tonight's lecture will conclude a series of three lectures given by Dr. Wieman, the first two being, "The Predicament of Religious Inquiry," and "The Source of Human Good."

Stassen to Talk In Eugene Soon

Harold Stassen, presidential aspirant, has been invited by the Lane county Stassen for President club to speak in Eugene this weekend. Plans are incomplete, according to James Rodman Jr., president of the club, but Stassen will most likely speak downtown.

Stassen is campaigning against Thomas Dewey for 12 Oregon delegates to the Republican convention. Oregon voters will choose between the two in the primary May 21.

Dewey spoke on the campus last week, and is now touring through the state. Stassen spoke at the University several weeks ago.

Panhellenic Offers Two Scholarships

Panhellenic will give two free scholarships to women students for the coming year.

Based on scholarship, need, and service to the school, the scholarship will cover the tuition for three terms. Petitions will be accepted in the dean of women's office from any women students in any class until May 21.

New Post

GEORGE HALL

Appointment Given to Hall

George Hall, assistant dean of men here from October 1945 to September 1947, has been appointed dean of Gray's Harbor Junior college in Aberdeen, Washington. His appointment is effective July 1.

Hall, who served as acting dean of men from April until September 1947 resigned to work on his doctorate in the school of education. He said yesterday he hopes to complete the work in the summer of 1949.

The junior college is a continuation of the Washington state public school system, and is one of nine such "j.c.'s" in the state. Each is headed by a dean, who performs duties approximating those of a college president.

Hall said yesterday that the new job was "exactly what I want to do."

Freda Mowrey To Talk Today

Freda Goodrich Mowrey, woman's club editor of the Oregonian will speak to women journalism students at 4 p.m. today in 103 McClure sponsored by Theta Sigma Phi, national journalism honorary for women.

Mrs. Mowrey is also scheduled to address the 9 a.m. senior editing class today on writing club news. At noon she will be guest speaker at a luncheon of the Eugene Business and Professional Woman's club.

Plymouth Retreat Planned at Colton

Members of Plymouth club, a group sponsored by the Congregational church, will have a planning retreat this weekend, May 14, 15, 16, at Camp Adams, near Colton, Oregon.

Arthur Elbon is general chairman for the retreat. He will be assisted by Glen Morgan, Mary Griffiths, and Marie Hammerquist. Plans for next year's program will be discussed by the executive committee.

Miss Mary Grubbs, adviser of the club, and Rev. and Mrs. Wesley G. Nicholson, will accompany the group.

Yearbook Distribution Set Today

Kwamas, Phi Thetas To Hand Out Oreganas in Court

The 1948 Oreganas, possible repeats of last year's All-American yearbook, will be distributed to about 2500 students today and tomorrow in McArthur court. Twenty-five copies will be available for cash sales at the educational activities office today.

Olga Yevtich, business manager, has warned that sheets of the book should be rolled before opening or the three full-color inserts will tear. This is caused by too much pressure on the inserts.

Members of Kwama and Phi Theta will give out the books from 9 a.m. to 12 and 1 to 5 p.m. at the south end of the court both days.

Speaks for Itself

Editor Ross Yates said yesterday that he wished to thank everyone who worked on the 1948 book. He said he will let this year's Oregana "speak for itself" and has "full confidence that next year's book will exceed any Oregana so far."

Because "color work is getting to be a tradition," Yates included three inserts of campus scenes in his book. The cover is a full-color copy of a picture by Kirk Braun.

Covering last spring, fall, and winter terms, the Oregana has three sections. Housing was handled by Warren Miller; activities by Laura Olson; and schools by Larry Davidson.

Editor Now

Trudi Chernis, junior in journalism, was managing editor of the '48 yearbook, and was recently appointed editor for the 1949 Oregana. Olga Yevtich, junior in business administration, is business manager for both years.

She said the first 304 pages were lithographed by Irwin-Hodson and company of Portland. Shelton-Turnbull-Fuller company of Eugene engraved the last 120 pages.

This year's Oregana includes different presentation of the housing section, a full page of cartoons, two pages of campus fashions, and a personality section which is eight full-length pictures of campus queens and kings.

Besides the copies at McArthur court, 250 yearbooks were sent directly to high schools throughout the state. They were paid for by Oregon clubs and individuals.

Male Student On Suspension List

A male student at the University was suspended from school this week on a charge of forgery, Vergil S. Fogdall, dean of men, reported yesterday. The student admitted the charge, he said.

According to the dean, the student cashed several checks totaling $167, to which he had signed names of other University enrollees.
